GIs Reach Coastal Area After Breakout; Marine Losses 'Heavier Than Tarawa'

Chest Opens 'Emergency' Drive for $887,000

Response Indicates Many Residents Were Never Asked For Contributions

The Community Chest yesterday opened its intensive eight-day "emergency drive" for $887,000—enough to realize the 1951 goal of $4,260,000—and proved its point:

That many Washingtonians—perhaps as many as 100,000—have not been approached by the Chest this year.

More than 100 area residents had called the special Chest number, MEtropolitan 6262, by last night. The majority of them said no Chest solicitor had been to see them. Their pledges totaled $1500.

General Campaign Chairman Hugh K. Duffield emphasized that the intensive drive depends on what he called the "snowball effect" of the concentrated publicity program.

Newspapers, radio and television are mobilized behind the Metropolitan 6262 campaign. Radio and television are donating spot announcements and special programs; newspapers are emphasizing with special stories the need for a successful goal.

"We hope," said Duffield, "that as this need is impressed—by constant repetition of the telephone number and the accompanying Chest appeals—that public response will snowball.

"None of us had any hope that on a Sunday, when there are fewer disc-jockey and local news programs, the drive would receive tens of thousands of dollars."

The prime motivation behind the "emergency drive"—the most

Easy to Make This A Red Feather Christmas

For those who were missed by Community Chest solicitors—and for those who already have given but want to give more—there's a quick, convenient way to make this a Red Feather Christmas.

During the emergency drive, call MEtropolitan 6262 at any hour of the day or night for the rest of this week. A volunteer Community Chest worker will pick up your donation at your home or office, at your convenience.

Snow Blankets District Area; Road Surfaces Become Glassy

By Bob Burchette-The Washington Post

Mrs. Alice Sanders of 1604 Carey la., Silver Spring, and her daughter, Pat, 3, pause to admire yesterday's snowfall.

Washington area residents are scheduled to wake up to a blanket of snow this morning—anywhere from 2 to 4 inches deep.

The snow, mixed with sleet and rain, left District streets covered with slush yesterday. It started to freeze last night.

Road surfaces in nearby Maryland and Virginia grew glassy as the temperature dropped steadily below freezing.

Fairfax County police said last night that county schools would be closed today because of weather conditions. Police elsewhere reported it was doubtful that schools would be open in the lower part of Prince Georges County, the western section of Montgomery County and in Loudoun and Fauquier Counties.

In Culpeper, State police said most of the roads were impassable and it was doubtful that school buses could get through. Schools in Arlington County and Alexandria were scheduled to open.

The weather forecaster warned that the thermometer might drop to 28 degrees by early morning, when the snowfall was expected to stop.

There will be a few snow flurries during the morning, he said. It will be mostly cloudy all day with the temperature going to the upper 30s. Rain or snow may follow on Tuesday.

The snow started falling at 12:19 p. m. yesterday, but above-freezing temperatures at first kept sidewalks and streets clean, the snow melting as fast as it fell.

By early evening, however, streets and sidewalks were covered with slush which began to freeze.

As the thermometer dropped, sanding crews from the Highway, Sewer, Water and Sanitation Departments of the District and Capital Transit Co. crews were put to work on bridges and some of the hilly streets. They had been mobilized shortly after the snow started.

Park police closed off all but the main arteries in Rock Creek Park. Motorists in nearby Maryland reported "slow going," with 10 miles an hour the maximum safe speed at some spots. Vir-

Emergency Declaration Is Readied

Order Is Expected In 3 or 4 Days To Prepare Nation Against All Dangers

By Raymond J. Blair
NYNT News Service

President Truman may declare a state of national emergency within three or four days, a high Government source said last night.

Such a move has been advocated by congressional leaders on the theory that it would awaken the public to the danger facing the country, help to hold down inflation and lay the groundwork, both actually and psychologically, for all-out home front mobilization.

Stephen T. Early, acting White House press secretary, first disclosed last Thursday that such a declaration was under consideration. Gen. George C. Marshall, Secretary of Defense, said Saturday Mr. Truman was "seriously considering" the move.

Presumably, the declaration would pave the way for price and wage controls. In addition, the government source said, W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, would take up with his labor-management advisory committee the question of a no-strike pledge.

War Labor Board Seen

A related move, he indicated, might be creation of a new war labor board to settle disputes resulting from wage ceilings. It was suggested in administration circles that Cyrus S. Ching, chairman of the Government's advisory wage board, might be asked to leave the wage board to head the new war labor board, if it were decided the present board should not attempt to settle disputes.

Early indicated last week that an emergency declaration was not imminent. But the Government informant said last night that it was.

"I think this is going to be a very important week," he said.

The Truman Administration already has authority under the Defense Production Act to impose wage-price-rationing controls, and the effect of an emergency declaration is under study at the Justice Department. Unofficially, it has been said that such a declaration would revive the power to end leases on war plants and other property and waive regulations requiring the advertising of bids for Government contracts. This would allow contracts to be let by negotiation.

A declaration, it is understood, also would permit the Interstate Commerce Commission to assign priorities on transportation facilities, authorize the arming of merchant vessels, waive mandatory re-

Four Americans

Kings Watch Winners Get Nobel Prizes

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Dec. 10 (AP).—Nobel prizes worth nearly $200,000 and inestimable prestige were presented today to nine men from four nations for outstanding services to mankind.

Four of those receiving the 50th anniversary awards were Americans. Others honored amid the splendor of regal celebrations here and in Oslo, Norway, were two Britons, two Germans and one Swiss.

In the auditorium of the Stockholm Concert Hall, Sweden's King Gustav VI personally handed the 1949 prize of $30,007 for literature to William Faulkner, the selfeffacing author-farmer of Oxford, Miss., who was wearing white tie and tails for the first time in his 53 years of life.

Norway's King Haakon was present at a similarly grand but solemn ceremony in Oslo, where Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, the only Negro ever to be so honored, received the 1950 peace prize for his work as U. N. mediator during the Palestine war.

In accepting his award—worth $31,674, Bunche said: "May there be in our time at long last full peace."

Two other Americans—Dr. Phillip S. Hench and Dr. Edward C. Kendall of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.—shared prizes for medicine in the Stockholm ceremonies. They received $10,571 each, along with Dr. Tadeus Reichstein of the University of Basel,

Marines who fought their way out of Red Chinese trap still know how to smile

Reds Reported Willing to Call Halt at 38th

Firm Pledge by Wu Denied by Rau; Reply Due 'on Battlefield'

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communists have told India that they are willing to stop their offensive in Korea at the thirty-eighth parallel, high diplomatic sources revealed tonight.

Sources near the Indian delegation said the Chinese Communist representative, Gen. Wu Hsiuchuan, told New Delhi's chief delegate, Sir Benegal N. Rau, yesterday that the Peiping government was willing to halt the march of its troops at the parallel as a basis for further negotiations.

At a news conference tonight, Rau denied that Wu had made such an outright statement but added that the Peiping envoy had told him the U. N. would be able to judge his government's intentions for itself from events in the field.

"That's the only indication I've had so far," Rau said, refusing to draw any open conclusions from it.

(Observers in Tokyo believed that the reported Chinese Communist offer to halt at the thirty-eighth parallel in Korea would contain too many objectionable conditions to be accepted.

(Some American quarters said reestablishment of the thirty-eighth parallel as a boundary between North and South Korea would be "regrettable" and contrary to the U. N. resolution calling for the country's unification.)

Wu reportedly said that no formal reply to the 13-nation appeal for a halt at the parallel would be made because an official Chinese acceptance of it might "weaken our moral stand." The reply to the appeal would be given

Out of Freezing Hell

Marine Guts Turn Disaster Into Day of Moral Triumph

By Jack Macbeth

WITH U. S. MARINES, Korea, Dec. 10 (AP).—American Marines walked out of 12 days of freezing hell today, full of fight after a gory nightmare of death in Korea's icy mountains.

The U. S. First Marine Division was rolling slowly into the northeastern Korea plains of Hamhung. The men's eyes and bearded faces, their tattered parkas and the strangely careless way they carried their rifles, showed the strain.

These thousands of Leathernecks did it on guts. They turned their encirclement into one of the fightingest retreats in military history. It was the longest pullback in Marine records—50 tortuous miles.

They broke out of a death trap sprung by many thousands of Red Chinese and Koreans and converted what looked like almost certain disaster into a moral triumph if not a military victory.

I watched the retreat.

The story began in the flea-bitten village of Yudam, on the western edge of the Changjin Reservoir.

Three Red Chinese divisions and one Chinese regiment attacked two Marine regiments in a surprise offensive the night of November 28.

The pressure was overwhelming. The Marines struck right back.

When orders were given to pull back, the Leathernecks responded—with an offensive.

For five hectic, heroic days they matched guts and wits against Chinese mass tactics. Neither was enough to win. They had to pull out.

Five days after leaving Yudam, the Marines reached Hagaru, at the south end of the reservoir. There they joined another small group which was encircled by strong enemy forces.

Elements of a third Marine regiment were under attack at Koto, 10 road miles to the south.

At daybreak, December 7, the Hagaru Marines jumped off southward toward Koto.

For 24 hours they fought one of the bloodiest battles of the Korean war.

I was in Koto when they came in. It was a gruesome sight—wounded men with their blood frozen to their skins; their clothes stiff with ice; grotesque dead men lying across trailers and stretchers; live men stumbling along, grimacing from frostbite, using their rifles as crutches.

Four thousand wounded were evacuated by air from Hagaru

Led Breakthrough

Alexandrian Is Hero of Changjin

When the radio at 2206 Valley Circle, Alexandria, yesterday began talking about Maj. "Slim" Sawyer and his Marine battalion, it was the first definite word about him his wife had heard in more than two weeks.

It also told Mrs. Sawyer something she had known all along.

The news dispatch told how, after two weeks in the freezing wastelands of the Changjin Reservoir plateau in Korea, the First Marine Division had fought its way through the Chinese Red encirclement.

And Maj. Webb D. (Slim) Sawyer had led the advance units in the breakthrough, carrying a piece of shrapnel in his foot for the last two days. His men were on the way to the warmth and hot chow and sleep available in Hamhung.

Mrs. Sawyer was duly elated at the success of the operation but her husband's feat was not too surprising.

"I always knew he was a hero, anyway," she said. In addition to his wife's indorsement, Sawyer has two Bronze Star Medals for his activities on Saipan, Tinian and Iwo Jima.

The radio dispatch was the first definite news Mrs. Sawyer had heard about her husband since his November 25 letter, written at Hagaru.

And then it was little more than "about how beautiful the country was." There had been a powdering of snow, he wrote, and with a full moon out, it was almost like daylight.

"I think Slim's over-security conscious," said his father-in-law and former operations officer in the Twenty-fourth Marines, Col. Charles D. Roberts, now on the staff of the Munitions Board at the Defense Department.

The Sawyers have a 1-year-old son, Duane.

3 Divisions Of Chinese 'Destroyed' In 12 Days

Decimated Force Completes 50-Mile Drive to Freedom; 4000 Men Wounded

TOKYO (Monday), Dec. 11 (AP).—Twenty-five thousand casualty-riddled American Marines and soldiers broke out of a Chinese Communist death snare in the "frozen hell" of northeast Korea Sunday.

By Sunday night the last elements had reached the vicinity of the eastern escape port of Hungnam, a field dispatch reported.

A staff officer said these last elements had pushed south of Chinhung this morning. Chinhung, 14 miles south of Koto, is the point where the breakout column joined forces with a rescue group which pushed up from Hamhung.

Losses Heavy on Both Sides

It completes the greatest, bloodiest retreat in Marine Corps history—almost 50 tortuous miles.

Casualties were heavy for both sides. An estimated three Chinese Red divisions—18,000 to 24,000 men—were destroyed in the battering-ram American drive to freedom from the shores of the Changjin Reservoir.

Only a conservative figure of more than 4000 wounded was available for the Americans, with deaths unreported.

An on-the-spot estimate was that Marine casualties exceeded those at Tarawa, the costliest single Marine action of World War II.

At Tarawa the Marines lost 985 dead and 2183 wounded. No figures on dead were available for the Koto trap, but more than 4000 wounded, mostly Marines, were flown out, making total casualties greater than Tarawa.

12-Day Running Battle

The outnumbered United States First Marine Division, a hundred British Royal Marines and elements of the United States Seventh Division were decimated in 12 days and nights of running battle with an estimated 85,000 to 120,000 Reds.

Still menaced was another American force of 6000 to 8000 members of the United States Seventeenth Regimental Combat Team. For security reasons, headquarters did not report the movement of this only American out-

Her Court Shrieks Send Ilse Koch To Psychiatrists

AUGSBURG, Germany, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Ilse Koch, the once-sexy "Beast of Buchenwald," shrieked "I am guilty! I am a sinner!" and has been taken to a psychiatric ward, informed sources said tonight.

The widow of the former Buchenwald prison camp commandant, who once allegedly wore tight sweaters and then had prisoners beaten for "raping her with their eyes," was said to have gone berserk as a result of the terrifying testimony of her sadistic brutality as told by witnesses at her trial for atrocities against Germans.

Informants said her wild activities began Friday afternoon and that she went into another screaming fit today.

Officials connected with her trial said the court's first business Monday morning will be to determine whether her condition is an act or whether she really is insane.

Thinned Ranks Give Answer

Anxious Friends Greet Marines With Only 'How Bad Was It?'

By Stan Swinton

ON KOTO-SUNDONG ROAD, Dec. 10 (AP).—Two watchful men stood in the dust-grayed snow beside the roadside. They waited a long time.

A great procession of vehicles passed them, crammed with men like a subway train at rush-hour. There was a jeep draped with a sky-blue supply parachute. There was a truck heaped with baggage. Sprawled on the baggage were unshaven Marines, wearing their sleeping bags for warmth. There was a road-scraper with GIs clinging to its icy frame.

The two men at the roadside were looking for some close friends they hoped had got out safely.

Finally, a truck wheeled to the roadside. It was the one they were awaiting.

A lieutenant, his feet bundled in burlap bags, slowly climbed down like a man asleep.

"How bad was it?" asked one of the waiting men. He spoke very softly.

". . . was killed. In the head. He was in the jeep. . . . and . . . and . . . were captured. . . . was wounded. That's all," the lieutenant replied. (He gave names which can't be disclosed until kin are notified.)

"I'm glad you made it," said the second man at the roadside. The three stood for a minute, not speaking. Then the lieutenant got back into the truck. The two men walked through the crusted snow to their jeep and followed the truck.

That was the way they came out. They were near exhaustion, bone cold and full of a soldier's deep awareness (not sadness, for it is a part of the pattern of combat life) of comrades lost.

But they were bitterly ready to fight again.

What were the words of these men whose gallant retreat will be history?

"It was tough. That's all; tough," said Pfc. James H. Wright, Nashville, Tenn., Marine reservist, as he crouched uncomfortably on a jeep trailer.

"Ninety-three hours and 40 minutes in the cab of this truck. Eating and sleeping here," said Sergt. W. T. Baucom, also of Nashville.

"We patrolled 500 yards off the road. There was a house. Three Marines, one British commando and one American soldier were inside. They hadn't eaten for seven days. The Chinese talked with them. The Chinese never hurt them; just left them there. But they didn't feed them," said First Lieut. Victor E. Johnson of Lakewood, N. J.

Roland Cournoyer of Worcester, Mass., patted the 30-caliber machinegun mounted on his truck.

"I used this baby a lot," he said.

They talked like that, professional soldier talk.

Their faces told more. So did the way they held to their rifles.

The way they silently watched the roadside and the convoy for the faces of their buddies said most of all.

Millions May Face Famine

Locust Plague Darkens Skies Of Africa, Southwestern Asia

CAIRO, Dec. 10 (AP).—The dread locust plague is darkening the skies over vast areas of Africa and Southwest Asia, threatening millions of impoverished people with famine.

The battle against the voracious swarms that have blighted these lands since Biblical times already has begun. Local governments and British and French colonial governments are appropriating millions of dollars to strike at the rapidly breeding insects before they can spread to the rich crops on which most of these countries depend.

The giant grasshopper-like bugs have been seen swarming toward the vital food, cotton and other cash crops of Egypt, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Libya, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Somaliland, Kenya, Tanganyika, French Equatorial Africa, Algeria, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Lebanon, Iran, Pakistan and India.

Abnormal summer rains in Saudi Arabia, which should be a welcome sight over that arid land, have turned into a threat because they encourage the breeding of the locusts.

That big Arab kindom apparently is the main breeding ground. Mobilized insect fighters in 1000 specially built desert trucks, armed with insecticides, poison bait, sprayers, mechanized pulverizers and other antilocust equipment, are heading toward the breeding grounds.

Locusts grow up with an almost insatiable appetite. Once they are able to fly, there is no stopping them. They will spread over millions of square miles within a period of a few months.

Representatives of the threatened areas have held an international conference in New Delhi to map out their strategy. They are expected to hold a similar conference soon in Tehran, capital of Iran, which reportedly has been invaded by huge swarms from Baluchistan, Pakistan and the Arabian peninsula.

'Unless Crushed, Will Return'

North Korean Premier Asks Annihilation of U. N. Forces

TOKYO, Dec. 10 (AP).—North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung today predicted a Communist victory in Korea with the aid of the Soviet Union, and called for a battle of annihilation against U. N. forces in which "not a single enemy can escape."

He announced, in ringing terms, the "liberation" of Pyongyang, 5000-year-old North Korean city, parts of South Korea and "all the areas north of the thirty-eighth parallel around Pyongyang."

Kim's statement to Korean Communists was broadcast in Chinese by the Peiping Red radio and heard by the Associated Press in Tokyo. He said federated units of the 'People's Army," guerillas and Chinese troops were "behind the enemy's rear south of the thirty-eighth" and are continuing their "great battle of annihilation in pursuit of the enemy fleeing southward."

"The United States tried through its so-called 'quick victory and quick decision' to unite the whole of Korea," said Kim. "But its ambitions have been smashed.

"In the last two months the children of our motherland—the People's Army — were pressed back by superior forces of the imperialist armies centered around the United States and were forced to withdraw. But this did not mean defeat.

"This strength of the people," he said, "will become the basis for victory through the aid and support of the Soviet Union and other democratic countries of the world."

Kim at the same time sounded a warning.

"The enemy is retreating in chaos at the present time," his statement said. "But unless he is thoroughly crushed the enemy will come back and will achieve his evil aims."

Services Tighten Original Plan For Special Yule Furloughs

No special furloughs will be granted over the Christmas holidays to servicemen stationed in the Washington area, the Defense Department announced yesterday.

However, most of the soldiers will get Christmas and New Year's days off — both falling on Mondays — besides getting the usual weekend time off. This applies to those stationed at Fort Meade, Md., and Fort Belvoir and Fort Myer, Va.

And the sailors and Marines will get at least one of the two days off, if station and base commanders decide they can be spared.

But airmen in the area—at Bolling and Andrews Air Force Bases and at other stations here—may get a better break. Individual commanders are authorized to grant furloughs and days off to those who can be spared from their outfits.

In all the services, the normal quota of furloughs will be permitted. A 10-day Christmas furlough for men in training camps was canceled Friday by the Army. Commanders were ordered, instead, to grant leaves to men who can be spared.

Corpl. Fling

Corpl. John P. Fling, son of Mrs. Alice P. Juarez, 3424 O st. nw., was listed on Department of Defense Casualty List 172.

Corporal Fling, now with the Seventeenth Infantry Regiment, Seventh Division, was stricken by polio at the age of 9. Hospitalized at Children's Hospital with his entire left side paralyzed, he recovered about a year later with no crippling effects.

No details of how Corporal Fling was wounded has reached his mother.

A letter written November 1 said he was "not far" from the Manchurian border.

"We are advancing fast without any resistance at all . . . we made a spearhead the other day to a small town and freed a lot of American prisoners. Boy, were we glad to see them, and they glad to see us," he wrote.

Corporal Fling enlisted in July, 1948, and was stationed in Tokyo since December of that year. He was sent into Korea in September.

He attended Gordon Junior High School and later worked as a pressman in the Columbia Planagraph Co., 52 L st. ne.

A brother, Edward E. Fling, 23, served in the army of occupation in Germany following World War II.

Every State Has Acted on Civil Defense

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 (AP).—Every State in the Union now has adopted civil defense legislation or established a civil defense organization by executive order, the Council of State Governments said today.

Many of these programs extend across state lines. Mobile aid battalions skilled in fire, police or rescue work would be sent to stricken areas either within or without the state.

At least 29 states specifically provide for comprehensive mutual aid programs between their cities.

Eleven states have specific provisions for regional interstate defense plans. They are Florida, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Montana, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Jersey, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Texas.

These mutual aid programs provide for evacuation and reception of injured and homeless persons. Another provision is for the exchange of medical, police, fire, public utility, reconnaisance, welfare, transportation, and communications personnel and equipment and supplies.

Attlee Aligns Canada With U.S. and Britain

PRIME MINISTER ATTLEE
. . . "What was the question?"

OTTAWA, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee said today that Canada has joined Britain and the United States in the new "peace without appeasement" alliance.

Optimistic over prospects of avoiding World War III, Attlee said Britain and the United States were "very close on objectives and very close on methods" to fight Communist aggression. He added that his talks with Canadian Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent and his Cabinet members showed Canada "is in general agreement with us."

"Very frankly, there are certain matters on which we take different views," Attlee said, referring to his talks last week with President Truman in Washington.

But he described the talks as of a general nature and "not really aimed at cut-and-dried decisions.

"They were much more to get the kind of friendly, frank discussions in which we can understand each other's point of view," Attlee told a press conference in the Canadian House of Commons.

In a nation-wide radio talk at night over the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., Attlee said "there is complete agreement between ourselves and the Americans on the objectives we seek to reach.

"They are very easily summed up: Peace, freedom for all men, with the opportunity to develop their lives happily and in their own way."

He also said Britain and the United States agreed that "the instrument by which these objectives must be attained is the United Nations organization. There is no other way . . ."

Attlee also said he had "every hope" that we shall soon be able to announce that a supreme commander for an Atlantic Pact army has been named.

He added that he was returning to London "fairly fully primed on the views of the leading nations of the North Atlantic Pact."

"We looked at events in the Far East in their proper setting in world events. We considered the long-term view. The talks were most satisfactory."

Attlee had surprised and reassured worried Canadian officials by his optimistic reports to the Cabinet and Commonwealth officials.

He said he was hopeful that a peaceful settlement could be reached with the Communist world.

600 New Zealand Artillerymen Sail For Korea Service

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Dec. 10 (AP).—A New Zealand expeditionary force of some 600 artillerymen sailed for active service with United Nations forces in Korea.

Prime Minister Sidney Holland was on hand to see the unit off. He said in the absence of any U. N. instructions to the contrary, New Zealand was proceeding according to the original plan to contribute to the U. N. effort, despite the deteriorating military situation in Korea.

New Zealand pledged the volunteer force soon after the Korean war broke out, and has since been assembling and training it in warfare peculiar to the Korean Terrian.

Ambassador Cowen To Return to Manila

Myron M. Cowen, Ambassador to the Philippines, who has recovered from a serious eye operation, is to return shortly to his post in Manila. Mrs. Cowen is expected to leave December 20, followed soon after by the Ambassador.

Cowen, who has been in Washington since early summer, has served in the Philippines since May, 1949.

Red Jet Downed

B-29s Drop Bombs on 5 Red Centers

TOKYO, Dec. 10 (AP).—Four American jet fighter planes today shot down a Russian-made jet in a running battle over North Korea.

The American planes, F-80 Shooting Stars, sent six other MIG-15 jets scurrying for safety across the Yalu River to Manchuria after a 15-minute dogfight.

The planes tangled at 18,000 feet. They swished over many square miles, dipping down to 6000 feet before the Communist crafte broke off the fight.

B-29 Superforts unloaded lethal blasts at five Red military centers, at Pyongyang, Kunu, Huichon, Sunchon and Kanggye. Pilots reported excellent results in visual bombing. No enemy ack-ack or fighter opposition was encountered.

Fifth Air Force fighter-bomber pilots said they killed or wounded 1600 Commnist troops.

Maj. Gen. Earle E. Partridge's night air summary listed the downed Russian-made jet as a "probable" since the American pilots did not actually see it crash, although it spun earthward trailing smoke.

However, Lieut. Arthur S. De. sonia, South Bend, Ind., was credited with bringing down the plane.

It was the second air battle of the day. A group of F-51 Mustangs were jumped earlier by four MIGs. No plane on either side was damaged.

The Superforts hit the Red Korean capital at Pyongyang first, then moved to the northwest and heavily bombed Kunu. They pinpointed railroads, storage areas and highway intersections.

A four-plane formation dumped 1000-pound demolition bombs on Huichon.

Sunchon was blasted by two formations of six B-29s, which dropped 500-pound bombs on the rail system and marshalling yards.

Kanggye, a rail and highway center on the main line of supplies coming south from Manchuria, took the brunt of the assaults.

Formations of B-29s—22 planes in all—roared over at regular intervals, dumping their bomb loads on buildings, air fields, marshalling yards and the rail line.

Fifth Air Force fighter-bomber pilots flew 291 sorties, 103 in close support of Allied ground troops. They reported destroyed or damaged:

B-26s flew 12 sorties to the Wonsan area on the east coast

China's Role in Korea Called Show of Vast Manpower

By A. T. Steele

NEW DELHI, Dec. 10 (NYHT)—Probably the biggest lesson to come out of the Chinese intervention in Korea is that China's immense reserves of manpower no longer can be discounted in any discussion of a possible third world war.

This is a sobering discovery. Many military men had supposed that in the event of a war between the United States and the Soviet Union, China would be unable to play more than a passive role. This view was based partly on China's deficiency in modern armaments, partly on her distance from the prospective European battlefields and partly on an old-fashioned idea that in the military sense China's numbers did not really count for much.

American military thinking has been slow to get over the point of view often expressed during the early years of the Chinese civil war—that "two or three American divisions could clean up this mess." That may have been true in China's warlord era. It is now painfully apparent that Communist China is a formidable military power—not by dint of material might but by virtue of regimented numbers.

The fighting in Korea has shown how the Chinese Communists have exploited this advantage and made it effective against even a massive superiority of airplanes, tanks and other modern engines of war.

It is likely that in the event of war the Chinese Communist role would be primarily in Asia, where their regimented hordes can be most effective in helping the Russians defend their eastern frontiers and bringing into line the productive and strategic lands of southeast Asia.

French Mobilize Paris Police In Fear of Communist Riots

PARIS, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Thousands of police were ordered mobilized tonight in fear of serious rioting Monday when Communists threaten to march on President Vincent Auriol's palace in protest against the rearmament of Germany.

It was believed here that the demonstration, ordered by "Iron Man" Jacques Duclos, acting chief of the French Community Party, may be the first of a series in western European capitals.

Duclos, who is acting in place of ailing Communist Secretary Maurice Thorez—now in Russia for treatment after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage — called on all workers to join in a general strike beginning at 4 p. m. Monday (10 a. m. EST).

The Reds plan to march along the Champs Elysees, the big street of Paris.

They asked workers of all political beliefs to join in the demonstration, most of them to mass close to President Auriol's Elysee palace. They asked especially that women and children be taken to the demonstration.

The turnout was ordered despite government warnings that demonstrators would be arrested because no license has been issued for a parade.

The Ministry of Interior announced that the Champs Elysees and all other approaches to the presidential palace would be heavily guarded.

Communists went from door to door today passing out leaflets calling on all Frenchmen to fight the "treason" of the government in agreeing to the inclusion of German troops in a western European army.

The leaflets contained a Communist declaration that the government had 'capitulated" to American demands for German rearmament.

Ghost City?

Export Ban Hits at Life Of Hongkong

HONGKONG, Dec. 10 (AP).—This British colony virtually has stopped functioning economically as the result of the American ban on critical exports that might find their way into the hands of Communists.

Gloomier observers held the view today that Great Britain's last foothold in China could become the "ghost city" of the East.

Two factors, they said, should determine whether Hongkong will change, perhaps overnight, from one of the Empire's biggest dollar earners to one of its biggest white elephants:

1. How far the United States will go in enforcing its embargo on "strategic" exports to Hongkong;

2. How closely the line will be drawn between "strategic" and "nonstrategic" goods.

When news of the ban hit Hongkong Saturday, the United States dollar tumbled from 6.45 Hongkong dollars to 6.17, lowest in nearly nine months. Businessmen predict that in the next few days it may drop to the official rate, 5.79.

There is no demand for American money when there is little possibility of buying anything with it.

American banks and Chinese banks with branches in the United States are refusing open letters of credit for would-be exporters.

Fifteen percent of Hongkong's imports are purchased in the United States. With this in mind it should be easy to see how Hongkong's future could be affected by rigid enforcement of the United States export restrictions.

However, some American banking sources here predict that the United States will be forced to relax the order. They say the "billion-dollar lobby" of American banking, shipping and insurance interests is bound to make itself heard in Washington quickly.

U. S. Is 'Sitting on Volcano' In Asia, Peiping 'Voice' Says

HONGKONG, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The People's Daily, voice of the Red China government in Peiping, declared today that "the Americans are sitting on a volcano" in Asia.

The newspaper boasted of vast advances for militant communism on the continent and at the same time denounced American economic, political, military and cultural "aggression."

The article, broadcast by Peiping radio, listed Communist successes as follows:

Half of Burma, it said, is under control of the "people's armed forces"; guerilla warfare has begun in Indonesia; the "liberated areas" in Malaya are growing; the Philippines "people's forces" have expanded to 200,000 men; 90 percent of Viet Nam is "free" and Ho Chi Minh's troops are marching on Hanoi.

Most of the Communist China press, however, concentrated on anti-British propaganda, centering its fury on Malaya, a pivotal part of southeast Asia.

Peiping radio, quoting another newspaper, said the British have been "inhumanly persecuting" the Chinese in Malay since July, 1948.

Latest reports said Kwangtung officials had stepped up both conscription and dispersal of government offices and had suspended all civil reconstruction in order to channel all resources into the war effort.

A drive also reportedly has started to draft one man from each family in Canton to rush completion of the city's two air fields. The atmosphere in that city has been described as one of growing tension, with soaring prices and currency depreciated about 30 percent.

Reds Tutor Tibetans

LONDON, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The New China News Agency said today that 1891 Tibetan soldiers captured by Chinese Communists in Tibet had been taken to China for a short "study course" and then given funds to return home. The Chinese report was broadcast by Radio Moscow and monitored here.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Parchey Mesirow

THE older a man gets (I am told) the more enjoyment he derives from his memories. That's probably because he has more of them than a younger fellow. Several of us youngsters were sitting around discussing these things recently, and after running the gamut of the events we were most likely to remember forever (our marriages, the births of our children, etc.) the subject veered over to memorable feasts we had enjoyed. It took no prodding to remind me of a gourmet dinner I once had the extreme pleasure of preparing and then presiding over as host.

For an appetizer, I served Russian Beluga caviar, the expensive, big-grained kind. I got myself a 25-lb. cake of ice, scooped out a hollow on top, and placed in this a shallow glass bowl of Beluga. In front of this monument were three other glass bowls, one containing very finely chopped Bermuda onions, one the chopped yolk of hard-cooked eggs and the third, the chopped whites of these eggs. Then there was a tray of very thin whole wheat crackers, toasted crisp and brown. To accompany this luxurious hors d'oeuvre, I provided a magnum of Bellows Brut champagne, which complements perfectly the flavor of Beluga caviar on crackers, topped with onions, egg yolk or egg white. To say that this got the dinner away to a good start is more than a slight understatement.

Then we moved into the dining room and took our seats. The first course was, of course, soup . . . a crystal-clear chicken consomme I had prepared the day before in a pressure cooker. I had cooked together a fine, fat old stewing hen, quartered onions, a stalk of celery, green pepper, parsnips, herbs and seasonings. When every last ounce of succulent flavor had been cooked out of the bird, I strained the juice and set it to cool. Then I made little balls of matzoh flour, eggs, butter and salt. Just before the feast, I heated the consomme and cooked the matzoh balls to the exactly perfect degree of light fluffiness, and added them to the potage. And with this, I served slightly chilled bottles of Vin d'Alcase, a 1943 vintage Reisling of rare bouquet and flavor.

Next came the filets mignon, beautiful cuts of prime beef, plump, juicy, perfectly marbelled, and broiled medium rare. Just before broiling, I covered each with butter and on this spread chopped garlic. The savory essence in the bottom of the broiler was poured over the steaks when they were ready to serve. Meanwhile, I had sauteed in butter with fine Sherry wine, a number of great white, fresh mushrooms, and these were used to blanket each filet. The vegetables were sensational. Fresh Spinach Supreme, cooked with Chablais wine. And baked Idaho potatoes, from which the meat had been scooped out and whipped together with cream, butter and aged Wisconsin cheddar cheese. This was then stuffed back into the potato shells, each one was generously sprinkled with imported grated Parmesan cheese and browned in the broiler. A really great Burgundy wine was served with this main course, the full-bodied, dry Maurice Crozet Beaujolais, vintage 1945.

The salad I served as a separate course. I had been to market, and bought the finest, freshest leaves of Romaine I could find. These I chilled, on ice, to crackling crispness. I made a standard French dressing, added anchovy filets, and then whipped this together in my Waring Mixer until the anchovies had completely lost their identity. I spread the dressing over the Romaine leaves with a lavish hand.

By this time all 12 of us were nearly surfeited. Anticipating such a condition, I served only a light pineapple sherbet for dessert, with petits fors and crunchy Hungarian walnut cookies. With this, we enjoyed a sweet Sauterne wine, the Grand Vin Fin of T. Jouvaise & Cie. And then we retired to the library for relaxation over coffee demitasse with Remy Martin V. S. E. P. cognac and Corona-Corona cigars for the gentlemen, and Cherry Heering (a sweet Danish liqueur) for the ladies . . . I think that you will perhaps understand why I believe that all of those present will carry the memory of this superb repast to their graves, and if I have, in the recounting of it, given you any ideas that you can use, I'll be happy to hear it! My address is 19th and K sts. nw.

Disaster Turned Into 'Moral Triumph'

and Koto up to two days ago. More have been flown out since. Most of these are Marines. The others were remnants of two battalions of the Army's Seventh Infantry Division, which was cut off and sliced up on the east side of the reservoir at the same time the Leathernecks were catching hell on the west.

The dead count is high. Two days ago I watched nearly 200 bodies nosed into a single grave by a bulldozer. There was no time for more elaborate arrangements.

Chinese Losses Much Heavier

For the record, the United States First Marine Division, one of the country's finest, has suffered heavily. The Communist enemy knows this.

The Leathernecks inflicted casualties on the enemy many times those suffered. The weather also took a heavy toll of Chinese.

Tension greeted the order for all the Marines to break from Koto.

One senior officer wept.

A grizzled Marine blurted: "These kids are too good to have this happen to them."

Saturday at sunrse patrols struck out from Koto toward Hamhung.

Inteligence reports had said the enemy was in this area in strength. There were fears that another bloodbath was in store similar to that on the Hagaru-Koto rd. earlier.

Column Stretches 2 Miles

But the patrols reached their objectives on schedule. One suffered moderate casualties; the other made it almost without incident. Immediately these groups had left, the vehicular columns began to move. Equipment considered more of a burden than its actual value was destroyed.

By noon the column was stretched about two miles south of Koto.

Dismal little Koto lies on a plateau 3300 feet above sea level. For two miles south the narrow road, if anything, goes up. Then it twists down a narrow gorge 12 miles to the valley below. Saturday and today it was covered with ice. The temperature was 25 degrees below zero.

For four hours the column stood motionless.

A bridge a mile below the crest had been blown by the Reds.

Before the engineers could work on it, a company of Marines had to drive off a pocket of Chinese guarding it. This was done. Fifteen Chinese were killed and 30 captured. Others fled.

Tough Bridging Job

Lieut. Floyd Ward of Evansville, Ind., commanded the bridging operation.

"It was a tough one," he said. "We didn't have enough of a span to close the gap so we had to build up the abutment. We completed the job in less than four hours."

Then the column started to roll, but road conditions made progress slow. By nightfall Saturday, some 100 vehicles had moved across the new bridge.

The entire operation depended on the effectiveness of this bridge. There was no possibility of a bypass. On one side was a rugged cliff, on the other a chasm.

About 9 p. m. artillery dropped several rounds in the bridge vicinity. One shell hit a truck.

As the enemy had not used artillery in this area before, and the fire apparently was coming from the bottom of a hill where a friendly battery was known to be in position, observers concluded it was friendly fire.

Sniping Throughout Night

Throughout the night there was sniping from the hills overlooking the winding road.

Shortly after midnight, the column came to a halt. It didn't move appreciably for four hours. Two miles south of the bridge, at a hairpin turn, two trucks skidded and blocked the road. About 100 husky Marines shoved them out of the way.

There was only starlight and brief flashes of brilliance as shells hit the towering hills all around us.

Four Marines on the truck I was riding huddled in blankets. All chewed gum and spoke occasionally in soft tones. They knew they dared not sleep. Each had a gun. A machinegun was mounted on the back of the truck, but it was not needed last night.

These kids mainly had two thoughts uppermost in their minds: their families and their determination to whip the enemy.

"I'm still carrying a small hunk of steel in my ankle," said one. "When I get home that will make me think of this damned place. Then again I'll feel like killing someone."

One Marine Carried Pup

The column, stretching bumper to bumper all the way up the road, moved in fits and starts.

Just before daylight the mountain grade became less severe and the turns less harrowing. We were nearing the bottom.

For some reason I thought at this point of the dramatic First Cavalry Division sweep which I had accompanied across country toward Seoul back in victory-flush September. The contrast of this now-successful retreat quickly dispelled such pleasant reminiscences.

One of the Marines on the truck had a Korean pup.

The dog had been whining through most of the night. As the full light of day appeared, the pup got up, stretched a bit and wagged his tail.

The pup's cheerfulness appeared to have been caught from his Leatherneck companions for whom nearly two weeks of concentrated hell had just ended. The Marines rubbed their sleepless red eyes and grinned.

Israeli Village Dedicated; Named For Washington

TEL AVIV, Israel, Dec. 10 (AP).—Givath Washington—a youth village made possible by funds raised principally in the Washington, D. C. area—was dedicated today in the presence of U. S. Ambassador James McDonald and high Israeli officials.

Givath Washington means Washington Hill. The village lies 20 miles southeast of Tel Aviv. At present 90 Jewish immigrant boys and girls aged 12 to 14 and their teachers inhabit the village.

Heading the American delegation was Rabbi Zemach Green, president of the Givath Washington project, for which $100,000 had been raised by orthodox Jewry in the United States.

Stone fragments from the U. S. Capitol building, the White House and Mount Vernon were sealed in a cornerstone of one of the village buildings at an earlier foundation stone ceremony.

Togliatti Back in Rome

ROME, Dec. 10 (AP).—Palmiro Togliatti, leader of Italy's two million Communists, has returned to Rome from Sorrento, where he has been convalescing from an operation for a blood clot on the brain.

fit to reach the Manchurian border at Hyesanjin. Its retreat route stretched more than 100 miles through enemy-dominated territory.

Also unreported were two South Korean divisions—the Capital and Third—somewhere north of Hamhung.

Reds on Move in West

On the relatively quiet northwest front United Nations forces moved into "defensive positions," General MacArthur's headquarters disclosed Sunday. A war summary did not pinpoint new positions.

However, headquarters said 2000 to 3000 Communist troops in black and gray uniforms moved east of Haeju—west coast Yellow Sea port just north of the thirty-eighth parallel—and about 65 air miles south of Pyongyang.

American warplanes blasted hard at the column.

This was considerably south of the 70-mile-long defense line announced earlier this week by MacArthur's headquarters which curled in a U-shaped arc between Koksan and Chinnampo. It was a threat to the western, or left flank of the Eighth Army.

Headquarters also said two Republic of Korea (ROK) divisions clashed with guerillas south of Chorwon, which is 13 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel in central Korea. The scene of frequent guerilla trouble. Chorwon is 103 air miles southeast of Pyongyang.

Reds Among Refugees

Disguised Chinese and Korean Red troops also were believed mingled with 10,000 Korean refugees streaming south of Pyongyang along railroad tracks to Sariwon, 35 miles below the Korean Communist capital city.

Another big refugee column was reported on the move at Chaeryong, 42 miles southwest of Pyongyang.

United States warplanes struck hard at the Reds on both the northwest and northeast fronts and fought two air battles with Russian-built MIG-15 jets.

In one 15-minute running battle, one MIG was shot down and six others scrambled to safety in their Manchurian "sanctuary" north of the Yalu River.

"Moral Triumph" in East

The fighting Leathernecks and Doughboys in the northeast, covered by Navy and Marine fighters and bombers, linked up with a relief column of United States Third Division troops at 2:40 a. m. Sunday (12:40 p. m. Saturday EST).

AP Correspondent Jack Macbeth said the Marines and soldiers "turned what looked like almost certain death into a moral triumph if not a military victory."

Macbeth had flown to Hagaru and Koto south of the Changjin Reservoir when the Marines were pinned down by overwhelming Red forces on the east side. He witnessed the entire retreat, from its first phase, a gory withdrawal down both edges of the big frozen lake to Hagaru, where Reds had the Allied base under fire from three sides.

Army and Marine survivors consolidated there, five days after the Chinese counteroffensive struck the night of November 28.

The second phase of the retreat came with a breakout from Hagaru over 10-mile ice sheathed road to Koto.

The roadway was a gantlet of fire for the trapped force. Chinese Reds fired down on it from high points on both sides.

Bloody 24 Hours

At daybreak, December 7, the Hagaru Marine forces struck out for Koto. In the ensuing 24 hours it fought one of the bloodiest battles of the Korean War.

Macbeth was in Koto when that battered half-blinded force came in with the blood of their wounds frozen against their skin. Walking wounded used rifles as crutches.

A medical officer with the Marines told the AP correspondent that Marine casualties were comparable to Tarawa—Coral Island in mid-Pacific which the Marines stormed with heavy losses, in November, 1943, including nearly 1000 dead.

The third phase of the retreat began Saturday when the Marines pushed off from Koto south toward the sea.

Again the Chinese were deployed in depth along the ridges on both sides of the canyon road. Formidable Chinese forces built by strength for another blood bath, such as the retreating Americans enduring from Hagaru to Koto.

But the Marines and Doughboys were not to be stopped. By noon Saturday the column reached two miles south of Koto, leaving a rear guard in the town and burning equipment it could not carry.

25 Below Zero Weather

The weather was insufferably cold—25 degrees below zero. For four hours the column was stalled by a wrecked bridge at a point where the road begins its descent from a 3300-foot plateau.

Engineers rushed their work. By nightfall Saturday about 100 vehicles had crossed the new bridge when another four-hour delay was caused by the skidding collision of two trucks at a hairpin turn.

When this obstacle was cleared the column jolted forward again to its meeting with Puerto Rican infantrymen of the Third Division. The end was in sight.

Macbeth said that more than 4000 wounded—mostly Marines—were flown out of Koto and Hagaru by Saturday. More were evacuated by air—transports and even Navy torpedo bombers—operating off rough cow-pasture landing strips until noon Sunday, when the Koto airstrip was abandoned.

200 Buried in Mass Grave

Another indication of high casualties came with the burial of 200 American dead in a rough grave covered by bulldozer. There was no time for elaborate ceremonies.

The Chinese Reds who hounded the retreating Americans also were shocked and numbed in the bitter struggle.

Front dispatches said hundreds of them sought to surrender to the Americans after being pounded by artillery and jellied gasoline fire bombs.

"They were more like the vanquished than the victors," a Marine officer said.

The Chinese threat to the east coast industrial towns of Hamhung and Hungnam is by no means ended, but rather increasing.

A force of 16,000 to 20,000 Reds was reported moving on the twin cities Sunday from positions west of Majon. United States troops were in wait for them.

Offshore, the United States fleet held evacuation ships ready for any eventuality.

The port was being held open—and so was the route of escape to it—at all costs, dispatches said.

Vehicles Bumper to Bumper

The stream of vehicles carrying Leathernecks and Doughboys went down the road bumper to bumper. Almost every vehicle was covered with men, "like ants on a sugar lump," said Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton, who was with the relief column.

Some 50 air miles south of Hungnam the Navy completed evacuation of the port of Wonsan under a curtain of naval gun fire. The United States heavy cruiser St. Paul and three destroyers—the Sperry, Hank and Zellers—gave protection until the last United Nations ground forces were pulled out.

This left Hungnam as the major escape port on the east coast.

In Seoul, the frightened, uneasy capital of the Republic of South Korea, a high-ranking Eighth Army spokesman said "no commitments" had been made for the capital's defense.

Chartered commercial airliners flew out about 50 United Nations and Economic Cooperation Administration personnel.

United States Ambassador John J. Muccio said no more evacuations were planned at this time. About 350 American civilians remain there.

Tehran Talks Begin

TEHRAN, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Seven Russian financial experts met today with members of the Iranian government for the first of a series of talks aimed at settling Iran's claim on 21 million dollars in gold blocked in Russia. The gold has been in the Soviet National Bank since the end of World War II.

BREAK-OUT—American Marines and GIs reached the Hamhung-Hungnam area (A) after fighting their way out of a Chinese Red death trap along the 50-mile road from the Changjin Reservoir. In the northwest, U. N. forces took up defensive positions (broken line), although a Red column (B) was reported east of Haeju, just north of the 38th parallel. Guerillas clashed with two South Korean divisions south of Chorwon (underlined), 13 miles north of the 38th parallel. Blast symbols mark areas bombed by U. N. airmen

Reds May Stop at 38th, Report on the battlefield, Wu was reported as saying.

The appeal to stop at the parallel was dispatched to Peiping last Tuesday by India and 12 other Asiatic and Arab nations.

Rau told reporters yesterday that Wu had informed him Peiping was giving "careful consideration" to the appeal and that it was "desirous to bring the fighting to an end as early as possible." But reliable sources said that Wu also said his government was willing to halt the Red offensive at the parallel with the understanding that no formal reply would be forthcoming.

Indian sources stressed, however, that Wu gave Rau no ironclad guarantees on the matter because several other diplomatic questions had to be resolved.

The sources indicated that the Chinese "reply" was made with the tacit understanding that the U. N. forces would also respect the parallel line and not reinvade North Korea. The Indians had indicated earlier that the appeal was drafted with this implication and, although no official Western reaction was available here, it was believed that the West would abide by it.

Meanwhile, dispatches from Tokyo said the Chinese forces had reached Sohung, 30 miles north of the parallel.

Rau held an urgent Sunday conference with eight others of the 13 nations that appealed to Peiping last week to halt at the north-south border.

He told newsmen afterward that conferees had discussed various suggestions for a draft resolution, which presumably would call for a formal cease-fire and buffer zone between the two armies in Korea.

The Indian delegate added that it was agreed he should produce a final draft that will be considered Monday morning by all 13 sponsors of the appeal to Peiping.

the case of the perfect gift

There's been plenty written and said with the prefix words "the perfect." This term has been applied to murder, weddings . . . offspring, even mother-in-laws.

However, over the years, many of the "perfects" proved unfounded. Murders are solved and the guilty discovered. Mothers-in-law sometimes say things and children . . . the very best of them . . . encounter difficulty with algebra or trig and spoil an otherwise perfect record. There are not many "perfects" that stand the test of time.

In fact, we can think of only a few in this material world. But here is one . . . the perfect gift! It shows exceptional thought and consideration. It shows the lucky recipient you wanted him to have just the right shade of magenta for his pipe cleaners . . . the exact sort of stripe for his shirt. It shows you wanted him to have the right size, the right color . . . the enjoyment of receiving and enjoying the thing wanted most.

How else could you accomplish this gift-giving perfection . . . but this one way. And, what easier way to do Christmas shopping. Of course, we're talking about Woodward & Lothrop Gift Certificates. They're perfect for Christmas gifts for the men on your list.

Soviet Army Stores Growing in Bulgaria

BELGRADE, Dec. 10 (NYHT).—A growing amount of data indicates that Soviet Russia has for some time been creating separate Russian military dumps in Bulgaria over and beyond the large quantities of war material it is furnishing to the Bulgarian Army. Further increases in the Russian stockpiles in the highly strategic satellite in the last two weeks were reported here today.

Responsible quarters differ on the possible use of the special Soviet stores.

The first and most cautious is that the material, which consists in large part of ammunition of several types and fuel for military vehicles, will be handed over eventually to the Sofia regime.

The second is that the Soviet stockpiles are being set up for the future use of the Russian Army, possibly against Turkey, Greece and Yugoslavia.

At present the Soviet military staff in Bulgaria is reported to be composed mainly of about 2000 advisers and specialists. There are persistent rumors of Russian troops in the northeastern corner of Bulgaria near the Black Sea but they are unconfirmed.

Two qualified observers estimated this weekend that the quantity of Soviet material in special Russian dumps in Bulgaria would be sufficient to sustain "several" Russian divisions in battle for a short campaign.

As a result, early information of separate Soviet stockpiling in Bulgaria was treated with considerable reserve.

In April, a capable military attache of a small Western State, who has spent many years in the Balkans, maintained that Bulgaria was in the process of being converted into an important and dangerous Russian military base.

An accumulation of further information since then has led into general acceptance of the basic fact of separate Soviet stockpiling. The remaining difference of today concerns the interpretation of the Russian move.

Silver Spring

In 1842 a high-spirited horse of a prominent citizen, Francis Preston Blair, bolted and ran into a secluded thicket of pines. When found, the mount was standing beside a spring of sparkling water made silvery by pulverized mica and white sand.

Mr. Blair was so struck by the beauty of the spot that he named it Silver Spring and built his home there—the beginning of today's fine community.

Bunche Receiving Nobel Award

Nobel Prizes Given Nine

Switzerland, for their research in hormones, including the discovery of cortisone, a potent agent in the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis.

The 1950 prizewinner for literature was Bertrand Russell, British philosopher, who receives $31,715. The 1949 prize — which Faulkner received today—was withheld last year because Nobel authorities could not agree on a winner. His works, about people in his own State of Mississippi, include such novels as "Intruder in the Dust" and "Sanctuary."

Prof. Cecil F. Powell, of Bristol, England, University, was the winner of the $31,715 physics prize for his work on cosmic rays. Dr. Otto Diels and Prof. Kurt Adler, the two Germans who share the $31,715 chemistry prize, were chosen for the discovery of the dien synthesis, a method by which odors and complex chemical compounds can be produced artificially.

Most of the members of the Swedish royal family were in the glittering Stockholm Concert Hall, along with some 1800 of the nearly 3000 specially invited guests. These included about 40 previous and new recipients of the prizes, which have been awarded since December 10, 1901, out of funds left by the late Alfred Nobel, the inventor of dynamite.

The ceremonies here marked the debut of television in Sweden, and many of the guests who overflowed into adjoining halls and nearby buildings watched the proceedings on specially installed television screens.

Men Dying Sooner Than U. S. Women; Both Live Longer

By the United Press

The American male is still dying off faster than his female counterpart, figures released by the United States Public Health Service showed yesterday.

The agency said death rates for men and women are going down but the women's rate is decreasing faster.

According to estimated mortality rates, 11.2 out of every 1000 men will die this year, compared to only 8.3 out of every 1000 women. In 1940, the death rate for men was 12 per 1000, compared to 9.5 for women.

Bunche Hailed At Oslo Rites

OSLO, Norway, Dec. 10 (AP).—Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, 46, grandson of an American Negro slave, received the Nobel peace prize here today, the first of his race ever to be so honored. He appeared deeply moved. Several minutes elapsed before the ovation ended so that he could speak.

"I am appreciative beyond the puny power of man," he said. "There are men who stand beyond who are also honored today."

Dr. Bunche referred to 10 members of the United Nations Palestine Commission who gave their lives during the work for peace, making special mention of the late Count Folke Bernadotte, who was assassinated by Jewish terrorists.

A group of American Negroes, mostly from the armed services, came from Germany to witness the presentation.

The group was headed by Lieutenant Colonel Beasley of Alabama, and included Sergt. Lucille Bruce, Detroit; Augusta M. Draper, Cleveland; Mamie Russell of Virginia; Lilian Kyles, Washington, D. C.; William H. Pryor, Carbondale, Ill.; Bessie Robinson, Cincinnati; Orlean Tartt, Chicago; Corpl. Emmett Herring, Cleveland; Corpl. David McArthur, Baltimore; Cara Coleyer, Newark; Corpl. tirement of military officers, and have other effects.

There were renewed demands in Congress yesterday for compulsory wage-price controls, and Leon H. Keyserling, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said some such controls will soon become necessary. He appeared on the NBC television program, "Meet the Press."

Meanwhile, President Truman's assistant and labor expert, John R. Steelman, made what amounted to a no-strike appeal to organized labor.

In a radio interview with the Gannett News Service, he was asked if he thought there would be any "crippling production strikes" during the current world crisis.

"No, I do not," he replied. "American labor is patriotic and cooperative in war emergency situations and can be depended upon to exceed even the all-time production records it set up, working with management, in World War II."

Demands for compulsory wage-price controls came from Democratic Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Wyo.) and Burnet R. Maybank (S. C.) and Republican Senators Irving M. Ives (N. Y.) and Homer E. Capehart (Ind.). They cited the GM-Ford rejection of the Government's request as evidence that voluntary measures will not work.

The new price administrator, Michael V. DiSalle, told Congress last week he would try a voluntary program of appeals to various groups to hold down prices.

How MILD can a cigarette be?

How Mild? I found the answer when I changed to CAMELS! My 30-day test proved they agree with my throat!

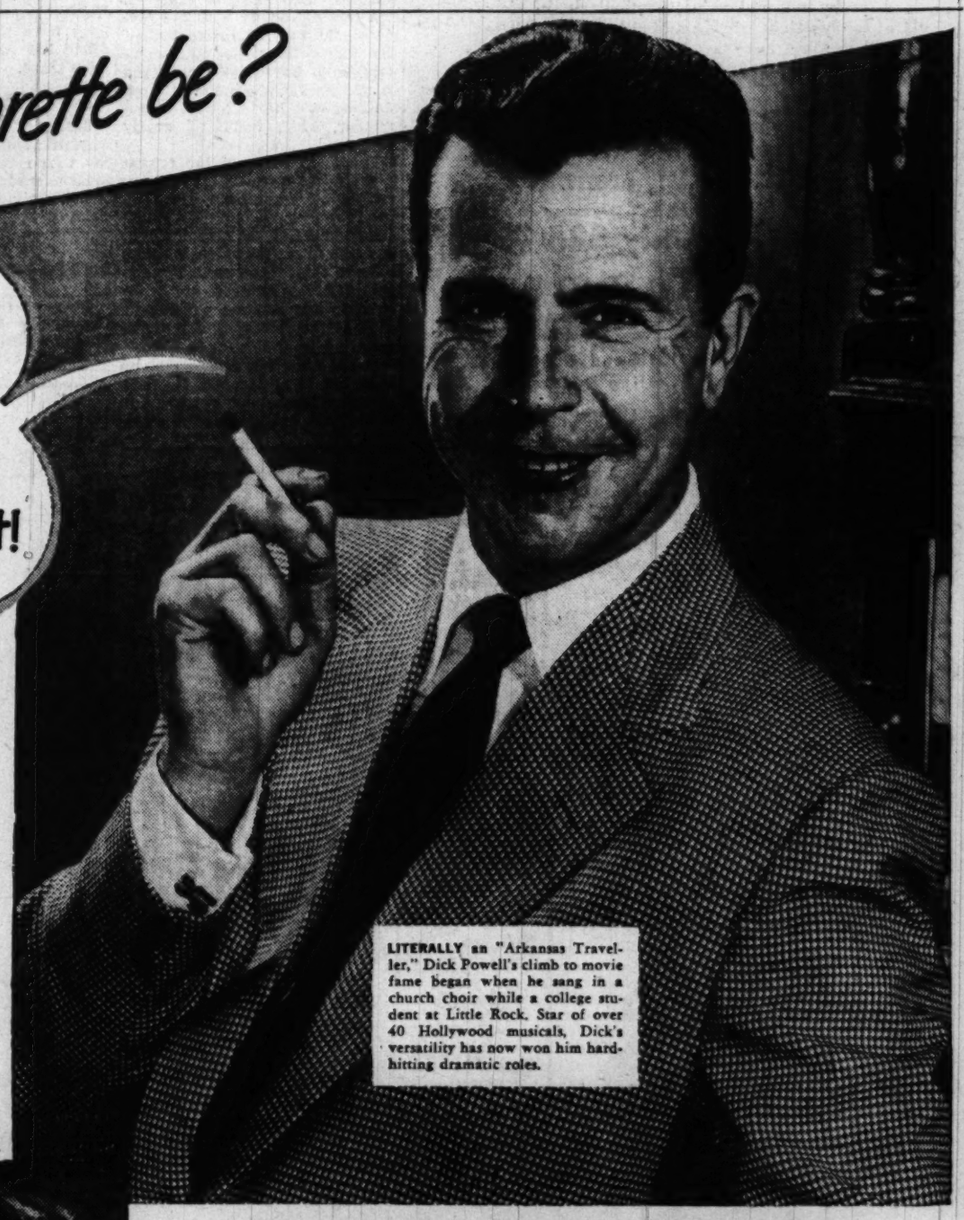
Dick Powell

STAR OF FILM AND RADIO

"Being in show business, I certainly can't risk throat irritation. That's why I was so careful in choosing the cigarette I smoke. I didn't decide on just one puff or one sniff. A fast inhale and exhale wasn't enough proof for me.

"Instead, I made what I think is the one sensible test . . . the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test. After I smoked Camels regularly for 30 days, I knew for sure they agreed with my throat. My own 'T-Zone' told me Camels are the mildest, best-tasting cigarette I ever smoked. It's Camels for me for keeps!"

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.



LITERALLY an "Arkansas Traveller," Dick Powell's climb to movie fame began when he sang in a church choir while a college student at Little Rock. Star of over 40 Hollywood musicals, Dick's versatility has now won him hard-hitting dramatic roles.

Fill The Chest

The wind-up drive of the Washington Community Chest is a spontaneous movement to save this thriving city from what would otherwise be a disgraceful failure. The war in Korea and our stepped-up rearmament efforts made it necessary to set a higher Chest goal so as to finance various services to men in uniform. Our national emergency has made it imperative to strengthen our community organizations. And the grave threat to freedom, looming bigger than it has done at any time since World War II, leaves us no alternative to tightening our ranks as neighbors and fellow citizens working together in a free society.

The campaign to date has been admirably handled. General Campaign Chairman Hugh K. Duffield and his army of Chest workers have earned the thanks of the entire city. In this final emergency drive for the $887,000 needed to fill its 1951 quota, the Chest is using imagination as well as sound organization to accomplish its aim. Radio, television and the press are carrying the Chest message into every home. Three hundred volunteer telephone operators will take your pledge, and Chest solicitors will make the collections. It remains only for the 100,000 residents of the Washington area who have not been reached, and others who can give more, to open their hearts. In this Christmas season and this time of emergency, no citizen can be unmindful of his fellows. Let us give until the Chest is overflowing.

Beguiling Words

Some beguiling words are coming out of the discussion of the Korean crisis at Lake Success. Through India's chief delegate, Sir Benegal Rau, the United Nations is informed that the Chinese Communist government is eager to see the war in Korea ended "as soon as possible" and is considering the appeal of 13 Asiatic and Near Eastern nations that the Chinese invaders halt at the thirty-eighth parallel. From other sources come reports that Mao Tse-tung is willing to negotiate with the Western powers on its own terms—equality at the conference table and assurance that all Far Eastern problems would be discussed. More alluring on its face is the proposal of Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky that "all foreign forces be withdrawn immediately from Korea." If words from Communist sources had not proved so appallingly deceptive in the past, new hopes for a peaceful solution might well be stirred.

For a moment take Mr. Vishinsky's proposal at its face value. In addition to requesting the General Assembly to call for the withdrawal of "all foreign forces," his resolution vaguely provides that "the decision of the Korean question be entrusted to the Korean people themselves." Now this is precisely what the United Nations is seeking. The United States and all the other governments cooperating with the U. N. in Korea would like nothing better than to see their troops home again. And the Assembly has already sent to Korea a commission charged with the obligation of establishing a unified, independent and democratic government for that war-torn land. With the removal of all foreign troops, the restoration of Korea could be left to this commission, with the addition of a Chinese adviser or delegate in recognition of China's interest in the future of her close neighbor.

What is wanting, however, is any faith that the Russians are proposing a genuine withdrawal of "all" foreign troops or that, if they did, the agreement would be adhered to. After Mr. Vishinsky finished his speech before the Political and Security Committee reporters swarmed around him to ask if it meant what it seemed to mean. They got nothing out of him except the assertion that his statement had been very clear and that his resolution spoke for itself. His statement had drawn a distinction between "volunteers" and "foreign forces." The "volunteers" were rightfully in Korea, he said, to afford natural self-defense to the Chinese people, while the forces sent there by the United Nations to put down the aggression of the North Koreans with Russian weapons, were of course intruders.

Moscow's persistent claim that the well organized Chinese divisions in Korea consist of "volunteers" is now further refuted in effect by the statement that the Peking government is considering halting them at the thirty-eighth parallel. But Mr. Vishinsky clings to the fiction and seeks to dupe the Assembly into withdrawing the U. N. antiaggression forces and leaving Korea under the domination of the Chinese Communist invaders. It is this colossal duplicity that undermines the hope for a peaceful settlement. The Chinese have been far less deceptive about what they are doing in Korea than has Moscow. But their close association with the Stalinists makes any sort of negotiations extremely difficult. Certainly no settlement through diplomacy will be possible unless the Chinese give more evidence of good faith than their Russian allies have done.

Excess Profits

The three billion dollars of additional revenue that the excess profits tax bill passed by the House is expected to yield (at the present level of profits) is a billion dollars less than the amount requested by the President. It is a very moderate over-all levy—in view of the huge aggregate volume of current corporation earnings remaining after payment of existing taxes. The question at issue, however, is not whether to tax corporation earnings more heavily, but whether to obtain the additional revenue from a limited proportion of all corporations in the form of an excess profits tax or by an across-the-board percentage increase in the corporation income tax. With few exceptions, spokesmen for industry favor the latter method, which could be adjusted to meet changing revenue requirements, as an alternative to a much higher rate of tax on excess profits paid by a small percentage of companies. Under the House bill, for example, it is estimated that only 18 percent of all nonfinancial corporations would be subject to excess profits taxation.

The strongest argument in favor of an excess profits tax in lieu of increases in the ordinary corporate income tax is that a flat rate increase would create hardship for corporations whose profits are declining and firms that have not benefited from the defense boom. Nevertheless, a uniform tax increase spread over all business profits would be less disruptive in its effect on business and much less likely to interfere with industrial expansion than a tax imposed on a part of corporate earnings arbitrarily defined as "excess" profits.

The Ways and Means Committee was fully aware of the defects of the latter method of taxation. This was shown by its incorporation in the House bill of extensive relief provisions. These include a $25,000 minimum credit designed to relieve small corporations from payment of the tax, liberalization of World War II methods of computing average base period earnings, allowance of higher returns on invested capital under the alternative, optional invested capital formula and the setting of a ceiling of 67 percent on total taxes—regular and excess profits—collected from any corporation. Complicated special provisions have also been introduced. Relief is provided for rapidly growing companies with low base period earnings. New corporations that began operations during or after the base period may be given credits equal to the average rate of return for their respective industries in the base period. Preferential treatment is accorded regulated public utilities that would virtually exempt them from payment of excess profits taxation—a provision that, according to Secretary Snyder, would result in a substantial loss of revenue and cause the Federal tax system to "lose its effectiveness for equitably distributing tax burdens." Mr. Snyder also harbors doubts as to the justice of the preferential treatment accorded corporations engaged in the mining of strategic minerals.

To be sure, the House bill is an improvement on the excess profits tax system of World War II. However, the attempts to provide more adequate relief for hardship cases and the adoption of a base period earnings credit equal to 85 percent of the average for the three best out of four years (1946-49), instead of 75 percent as urged by the Administration, will lower the yield. To obtain the four billion dollars of additional revenue recommended by the President, therefore, the rate of the excess profits tax, set at 75 percent, would either have to be increased, or the base period earnings credit reduced, with the result that the incentive to wasteful expenditures inherent in this system of taxation would become all the greater. Secretary Snyder has tentatively suggested that one way to prevent corporations subject to excess profits taxes from cheating the tax collector would be to permit the Bureau of Internal Revenue to disallow unnecessary and unreasonable expenditures for tax purposes. This is a pernicious proposal. For it would give the Treasury such extraordinary powers of control over the spending policies of privately owned corporations as to constitute an intolerable and dangerous invasion of the field of private enterprise. Yet no one has suggested any other feasible plan for preventing the waste that is inevitably encouraged by heavy taxation of excess profits.

Apparently Congress is all set to pass some kind of excess profits tax bill at the present session. But it is to be hoped that any changes made in the House bill by the Senate will be in the direction of liberalizing rather than stiffening its provisions. That will, at least, leave the way open for consideration by the incoming Congress of alternative methods of raising still more revenue from corporation taxes. Considerably more than three or four billion dollars will eventually be needed from this source to help cover the costs of the defense program. The answer to the question of how much depends upon the (1) cost of the defense program, still a matter of conjecture, and (2) the decisions reached in regard to increases in other taxes.

Certainly the bulk of the huge amount of revenue that will unquestionably be needed to finance a pay-as-you-go policy or an approach thereto, cannot be obtained by taxation of profits. It will have to come from an expansion of excise taxes—a potentially prolific source of revenue—and increases in individual income taxes. These are the kind of taxes, moreover, that curb consumer spending and so arrest inflation. Taxes on corporations produce revenue, but if they are inequitably distributed, they are more likely to stimulate inflation than to discourage it.

Harry Gold

The sentence of thirty years imprisonment given to Harry Gold, of Philadelphia, who confessed that he had served as courier for a Communist spy-ring that was transmitting atomic bomb secrets to the Soviet intelligence, is certainly severe. It is only one degree short of the maximum penalty, which is death. The prison term is longer by five years than even the sentence proposed by Attorney General McGrath.

In imposing the sentence Judge McGranery said that he had taken into account that Gold had not only pleaded guilty to the charge but had given the authorities information helpful in rounding up other members of the conspiracy and in the preparation of the cases against them. At the recent trial of Abraham Brothman and Miriam Moskowitz in New York, Gold had given the testimony which assured their conviction. Nevertheless, the judge asserted that these considerations were outweighed by the necessity of deterring others whose perverse loyalties might prompt them to engage in similar conspiracies and crimes.

Since the United States is already informally at war with one great Communist power and hovering upon the brink of outright war with another, and since there still exists within the United States a fanatic and ingenious fifth column watchful of every opportunity to serve the national enemies, Judge McGranery's reasons have a good deal of force. There is also the probability, in view of Harry Gold's cooperative behavior since his arrest, that a Federal prison is the only place in which he can now feel sure that his life will be safe.

Like so many others, Gold seems to have been primarily the victim of his own warped reasoning and of the curious credulity that appears to result from the lopsided character of much modern education. He was, as his attorney told the court, one of those "idealists" who before 1939 could be so readily persuaded that the cause of idealism can be advanced by embracing dialectical materialism, and who were rarely even dimly aware of the monstrous paradox implicit in this notion. The methods employed in the seduction, indoctrination and development of such persons are described in the now famous Report of the Canadian Royal Commission. The report also discloses how specially susceptible to these methods were persons whose education had been mainly scientific or technological. Gold was a biochemist.

Faulty education may be said to have been one great element in the tragedy that has overtaken this man, who in less febrile times might have lived and died in contented obscurity. The second great element is that his repentance has come a year or so too late. For there are, alas, many other idealists who have gone through the same experience of infatuation and disillusion, and some who have, like Gold, dabbled in treason and conspiracy. Thus, as he passes through the gates of the penitentiary, they have reason to exclaim with both shame and compassion, "There, but for the grace of God ——"

Health Services

There was urgent need for Federal financial aid to State and local health departments long before the threat of a major war became acute; the need is now underscored and clarified by the importance of such departments in the mobilization of civil defense. They would be the country's principal refuge in case of atomic or biological warfare attack. We believe, therefore, that the House should act on the local public health services bill, which the Senate has already passed, during the present session. The bill has been reported favorably by the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and is now in the Rules Committee.

State and local health departments are woefully inadequate. Some 40 million Americans live today in areas where no local full-time public health departments exist; and it is estimated that nearly a hundred million others have only inadequately staffed departments available. The cost to the country in time lost from productive effort and in the incidence of preventable or controllable diseases is much too high. The cost in lives and human suffering in the event of widespread aerial attacks on the United States would be incalculable.

The civil defense report of the National Security Resources Board recommended that "in each State, the State health officer should be placed in charge of all civil defense health and medical services; and cities should appoint local officers in the same manner." The report pointed out also that "special measures must be taken to enable civil defense organizations to deal with the problems arising from atomic, biological and chemical warfare . . . The effects of these special weapons are of such a nature that defense against them becomes primarily the responsibility of the health and medical services."

But the plain fact is that in many areas there simply is no such defense at all. And it is highly possible that war production plants and other vital installations will be dispersed into just such areas, with large concentrations of war workers clustered around them. Many cities which might become bomb targets are lamentably lacking in health facilities. The problem is not one on which the country can afford to defer action.

Matter Of Fact

How We Went Wrong

WHEN HIGH and trusted officers have made disastrous errors, the right policy is not to raise an outcry of defense and blame. The right policy is to find out what actually happened, and to see how the same mistakes can be avoided in the future. The different parts played in the Korean disaster by the President, his civilian subordinates, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Gen. Douglas MacArthur should be thus examined, coolly and calmly.

The first problem is to isolate the error that produced the disaster. This was, undoubtedly, the "home by Christmas" offensive, ordered by General MacArthur last month. Our small and divided forces were bound from the first to suffer shattering reverses in this operation if they encountered serious opposition. On the other hand, if our forces had consolidated and dug themselves into strongly fortified positions on the narrow neck of Korea, where air power, tanks and artillery could have played their proper roles, we could have hoped to inflict a bloody defeat on any attacking Chinese army, however numerous.

What is now seen as the wrong decision, to launch the "home by Christmas" offensive, was reached after and in spite of the appearance of the first Chinese units in the Korean fighting. This first sudden appearance of Chinese troops in Korea, in October, caused immeasurably more concern in Washington than in Tokyo.

IN WASHINGTON, the gravest warnings were received from British intelligence about the Chinese capabilities and intentions. But in Tokyo, General MacArthur had expelled the American intelligence without protest from Washington. He was therefore relying wholly upon his own G-2 staff section and its independent agent net. By this means, it is now known, the Chinese and Russians caused a wholly false picture of the situation to be conveyed to General MacArthur, and thus enticed him into an enormous trap.

Because of the warnings received in Washington, it can now be stated that the Joint Chiefs of Staff were filled with apprehension when MacArthur sent them the plans for the "home by Christmas offensive." This apprehension, plus the representations of the British government, in turn led the Joint Chiefs to send an anxious message to Tokyo.

In this message, the Joint Chiefs pointed out to General MacArthur that almost the whole existing forces of the United States had been committed to him. They stated that full-scale involvement with the Chinese would be a full-scale catastrophe. And they inquired whether it would not be more prudent to consolidate on the narrow neck of Korea, at least until the general position was more clear.

Generally MacArthur replied to this significant inquiry in an equally significant manner. In effect, he took off his hat as an American theater commander. He put on his even grander hat as United Nations commander. He declared that his projected offensive was only intended to fulfill his directive from the United Nations. And he inquired whether the Joint Chiefs of Staff wished to alter or amend this U. N. directive.

The nature of the Joint Chiefs subsequent reaction, and of the President's handling of the problem as Commander in Chief, can be gauged from a single authoritatively reported episode. Both the smallness of our forces for the projected offensive, and their division geographically and under two commanders, meanwhile greatly troubled certain of President Truman's civilian advisers. They urged the President to discuss the matter carefully with the chairman of the Joint Chiefs, Gen. Omar Bradley.

The President accordingly took the matter up with General Bradley. General Bradley quite frankly confessed to the President that he shared the same concern. But, he added, "he could not fight MacArthur's war for him," and recalled the good American tradition of leaving wide tactical latitude to the commanders in the field. In the same sense, General MacArthur's appeal to his U. N. directive was also answered by the Joint Chiefs. And thus the great error was made and disaster followed.

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S role in these exchanges speaks for itself. Equally obvious are the motives of the refusal to overrule him. On the one hand, although deeply worried, the President, the members of the National Security Council and the Joint Chiefs of Staff were no doubt influenced by the brilliance of MacArthur's previous success. On the other hand, they were also influenced, just as undoubtedly, by the certainty that any counterorder to MacArthur would produce a flood of inspired Tokyo reports, that an Administration "soft" toward the Chinese Communists had willfully cast away the fruits of our Korean victory.

Unfortunately, the fact remains that the decision to launch the "home by Christmas" offensive was not in any sense a tactical decision of the sort which should have been left to the local commander. It was a great political and strategic decision, which has now brought us to the very brink of general war. Legally, and constitutionally, such decisions are the sphere of the President and the Chiefs of Staff, and the wrongness of local commanders does not absolve them from responsibility. Indeed, it would be hard to find anything more disquieting than this set of facts, which displays the methods of our leadership in this time of dire peril.

God in the U. N.

The letter of December 6 from the dean of theology, Catholic University, seems to call for comment.

The Dean is offended because the United Nations decided not to open its meetings with Christian prayer; overlooking the fact that this is a world organization, and that a Christian service of this kind is not acceptable to millions of God-fearing people.

He says that this decision is a "rejection of the Creator," and "an exclusion of God from the U. N." But it is no more so than the failure of our Supreme Court and our many executive departments to begin work each day with a religious ceremony.

Moreover, there are a great many very intelligent persons connected with the United Nations who are quite sure that an omnipotent and omniscient God (already having full knowledge of every wish of man) will not change His mind and alter His plans, when man injects a stereotyped vocal statement of a desire already known.

The dean suggests that there is some connection between the failure of the United Nations to open its meetings with Christian prayer, and the tragic miscarriage of its program in Korea. This is certainly a far-fetched conclusion. It seems quite clear either (1) that God is helping our atheistic enemies, or (2) that for His own good reasons He is not interfering in the matter at all.

Help From Our Allies

At the outbreak of the Korean war thousands of young men in France, Italy, Japan and other countries tried to volunteer for service against the Communists. Regardless of the merits of using them in Korea, we have now reached the point, it seems to me, when we must begin to accept more help from our allies, especially in manpower.

We must reexamine our position, for it is evident that if we continue to carry the major portion of manpower and underwrite the cost of the U. N. we shall break down under the weight of the load.

In trying to carry the whole load, or very nearly the whole load, both in men and money, are we not playing right into the hands of Russia? The Kremlin could wish for nothing better than for us to bleed ourselves white fighting little wars all over the world.

Our manpower, I think, will be worth more during the coming years at home rather than fighting on foreign soil. And by building up our industrial strength here at home we will be better prepared to help our allies, who have the manpower but do not have the industrial strength to win wars.

We must find a way to help the United Nations create a world police force to put down aggression wherever it arises, which would allow each participating member to carry its part of the burden of sacrifice for the survival of civilization.

Color And Propaganda

To be a student of international affairs is to be keenly aware of the role of "color" among the peoples of the world, and the effects of petty bigotry on the opinion of these peoples. It is these "small incidents" that attract the attention of the foreign press. This is the ground of half-truth upon which our enemies build their thesis that we are anti-democratic, that this country is seething with race and religious prejudice, that lynch-law has priority over common law in the United States.

Thus do the bigots supply the sycophantic press of communism with clubs with which to beat us. Unwittingly, they are giving aid and support to our mortal foe. Too bad there are no "McCarthys" to investigate this form of subversion.

Three-quarters of the people of the world are colored. It is just these people that we are trying to win in the greatest ideological battle of all history. If we intend to triumph then we must bring our practices at home into line without democratic concepts as represented abroad.

A college-educated Negro employe of our school was refused service at a downtown drugstore; he was blandly told to take his order outside the store. This is, we believe, not only a contravention of recent Supreme Court decisions but, more important, a travesty of justice. It is now that the left hand must be aware of what the right is doing. One cannot heal while the other wounds.

Patent Power

Justice Douglas would have the "pure" scientist scratching in the dirt with a stick to do his figuring—if one believes his statement on gadgets in the opinion of the Supreme Court published in your issue of December 5. The "pure" scientist is made a possibility by the fact of being surrounded by gadgets—pencil with eraser, paper, desk lamp!

The constitutional phrase establishing the Patent Office reads "for the purpose of promoting the progress of science and the useful arts"! It was established not simply for pure science but to protect and encourage the little man who made gadgets for more comfortable living—buttonhook, electric switch, or whatever. And who can tell when one of these minor inventions will fit into a lot of others and be the mainspring of a clock, or the final fact that made an atomic bomb possible?

This attitude of the respected justices could conceivably give the examining corps of the Patent Office the power to judge how important each application is, not how patentable or useful. Was that the intent of the phrase, "and the useful arts?" To me the justices have gone far afield from the intent of that phrase. A. H.

Courage From History

I notice that the Alsops, in their December 6 column, draw a parallel with the Peloponnesian War. But if we are going in for historical parallels, let us not forget that if there was Sicily, there was also Salamis. And the parallel is more apt. The Greeks before the Persian invasion were as disunited as the West is now, the enemy they faced was as formidable and ruthless as ours. To all appearances, they were hopelessly outmatched. Yet Marathon saved the West from slavery, and began the tradition which is ours today.

I am not disputing the Alsops' competence nor the general interest of their articles, but it seems to me that their tone is more calculated to inspire gloomy despair than courageous resistance. And courage is what we need.

Hill Family

A story in The Washington Post and another paper of November 29 records the saddest case I have ever learned of. [Editor's note: The story relates the death of John Hill of Arlington four days after he, his wife and two daughters, one a baby, had been evicted from their home for nonpayment of rent. The back rent was paid after the judgment was obtained but did not stop the eviction.] I am inclosing a check for $5 for the benefit of the family of John Hill.

A tragedy as great as this sounds more like something in a foreign country than near the Capital of the United States. Why did not Community Chest agencies render some assistance before the tragedy occurred?

Beltsville Crossing

In light of your November 30 news story I should also like to inform you of the lovely little railroad crossing the B. & O. has furnished the citizens of Beltsville in order to travel to and from their homes across the tracks. Just recently they fixed the crossing so that now it is half-way decent to cross, but they still have not bothered to put any sort of gates or even a small bell to warn the people.

You might wonder why they don't "Stop, Look and Listen." That is also an interesting subject for comment. Have you ever looked down the tracks to see if a train were coming and have about 10 lights shining in your eyes, never knowing whether they mean a train, a car or just the reflection of some restaurant sign gleaming on the rails? Have you ever noticed the amount of noise a huge trailer truck makes as it is speeding down a highway or the amount of noise a car makes turning into some restaurant or liquor store along the highway? With all the noise it's pretty difficult to listen for an oncoming train.

A-Bombs in China

Military men seem to think that there are no targets in Korea worth the expense of the atomic bomb. I say that it is impossible for them to say what the psychological effect of an atomic bomb will be on low-class troops until they have tried one. I urge that a warning bomb be dropped at night fired high in the air so as to not kill many troops but to scare them. Follow this with warning leaflets and see is the Chinese troops don't start giving up.

Europe seems to think that it will take all of our effort to defeat Red China. I believe that we can do it without sending any more men by using the atomic bomb, Nationalist troops and by taking into the U. S. Army or United Nations army all who will join up from Asia. If we don't finish off Red China now, all of the people of Asia and all of the arms that they can make will show up against us in Europe.

It will break us financially to let the present situation go on and on forever. Let's roll up our sleeves and go to work on China. If Russia wants to get in the act, then we can get the whole thing over with. I am willing to bet that when we show that we really mean business Moscow will sing a different tune. On the other hand, to back up now will surely lead us to war with Russia. I can't blame England and France for being afraid of bringing on the atomic bomb, but I say for their own good we must be firm.

Today and Tomorrow

Withdrawal and Reexamination

MR. ATTLEE'S talks with Mr. Truman will have achieved all that is possible at the present moment if they have averted any of those irreversible decisions which are threatening to break up the Atlantic alliance in Europe and the United Nations front in Asia.

Lippmann

MR. ATTLEE came to Washington not only as the Prime Minister of Britain but as the spokesman of the Commonwealth and of our allies in continental Europe. The reason he came so suddenly is that throughout the world our friends are afraid that to the defeat in Korea we might react blindly and impulsively rather than with foresight and deliberately.

Mr. Attlee came because our allies were afraid, not without provocation from here, that we might jump out of the North Korean frying pan into the fire of a Far Eastern war. Were we to do that, the governments which might feel in honor bound to follow us would not be able to carry their peoples with them. Our only ardent ally would be Chiang Kai-shek. The great objective of Soviet diplomacy would then be achieved. The United States would be isolated from its allies and all its power and influence diverted up the bloody blind alley of a Far Eastern war.

WHILE the armies are retreating in Korea, the right thing to do and the best thing to do about all the larger questions of policy is to make no irreparable decisions — no far-reaching promises and no wide-ranging threats — under the stress of emotion and in order to relieve, not our hard pressed army, but our own feelings. Until the military position in Korea is settled one way or another, we cannot reasonably and in prudence we should not tie our hands by making concessions or by making threats. The time for critical decisions about a larger war or a larger settlement will not come until General MacArthur has consolidated a line inside Korea or has evacuated his forces from Korea.

It cannot possibly help General MacArthur and his troops to enlarge the war. They will not be better off if in addition to the Chinese ground armies they also have to contend with large elements of the Soviet air force and of the Soviet navy. Nor can the military position be retrieved or much improved by conceding now things which would be elements in any general negotiation.

MY OWN VIEW is that our paramount and immediate preoccupation should be the preservation of our forces, and that our aim should be to effect an orderly withdrawal to Japan. Then, with salt water between us and the Chinese-Soviet masses, there will again be a military equilibrium between the infantry of the Asian mainland and the naval and air power of the United States.

Then, and only then, it seems to me, will it be possible to carry out that reexamination and revision of our global policy which is imperative if we are to avert the disruption of our alliances and the disintegration of the Atlantic community. The defeat in Korea is a warning which, if we heed it, may yet prove to have been our salvation, that the course which we took with the Truman Doctrine is based on a fatally wrong estimate of our adversaries, and of our friends, and of ourselves.

THEN, too, and only then, I fear, can we repair and restore the fearful damage which our institutions have suffered as a consequence of that great mistake. For our inability to make good the global promises of the Truman Doctrine precipitated the fearful quarrel within the Nation and between the parties over where our limited forces should be committed.

In the course of that quarrel the constitutional system for the conduct of United States foreign policy has been so seriously shaken that it is no longer clear where, if anywhere, resides the authority to conduct the foreign relations of the United States. This has caused a profound crisis of confidence, as it would in any nation where the people no longer knew where to look for leadership in time of trouble.

German Reds Ask Jail For War Propagandists

BERLIN, Dec. 10 (AP).—East German Communists campaigned today for a law that would jail anyone they considered a war propagandist.

A peace committee organized in the Soviet zone demanded that the legislature pass an ordinance branding as criminals those who use the spoken or printed word to spread war propaganda. The action implies that such a law will be passed, since communism's top layer in East Germany dictates the peace committee program as well as that of the legislature.

The World's Greatest Christmas Stories

A Shepherd

For the first time, the Christmas masterpieces of many nations have been brought together in a new anthology edited by Eric Posselt.

This is the first of a two-week series of selections taken from his book, "The World's Greatest Christmas Stories," just published by Prentice-Hall.

Today's story is by Heywood Broun (1888-1939), a newspaper reporter and author who became a widely known columnist and correspondent for the old New York World and later for the Scripps-Howard newspapers. The story is from the posthumous "Collected Edition" of Heywood Broun.

By Heywood Broun

The host of heaven and the angel of the Lord had filled the sky with radiance. Now the glory of God was gone and the shepherds and the sheep stood under dim starlight. The men were shaken by the wonders they had seen and heard and, like the animals, they huddled close.

"Let us now," said the eldest of the shepherds, "go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which has come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us."

The City of David lay beyond a far, high hill, upon the crest of which there danced a star. The men made haste to be away, but as they broke out of the circle there was one called Amos who remained. He dug his crook into the turf and clung to it.

"Come," cried the eldest of the shepherds, but Amos shook his head. They marveled, and one called out, "It is true. It was an angel. You heard the tidings. A Savior is born!"

"I heard," said Amos. "I will abide."

The eldest walked back from the road to the little knoll on which Amos stood.

"You do not understand," the old man told him. "We have a sign from God. An angel commanded us. We go to worship the Savior, who is even now born in Bethlehem. God has made His will manifest."

"It is not in my heart," replied Amos.

And now the eldest of the shepherds was angry.

"With your own eyes," he cried out, "you have seen the host of heaven in these dark hills. And you heard, for it was like the thunder when 'Glory to God in the highest' came ringing to us out of the night."

And again Amos said, "It is not in my heart."

ANOTHER shepherd then broke in.

"Because the hills still stand and the sky has not fallen, it is not enough for Amos. He must have something louder than the voice of God."

Amos held more tightly to his crook and answered, "I have need of a whisper."

They laughed at him and said, "What should this voice say in your ear?"

He was silent and they pressed about him and shouted mockingly, "Tell us now. What says the God of Amos, the little shepherd of a hundred sheep?"

Meekness fell away from him. He took his hands from off the crook and raised them high.

"I, too, am a god," said Amos in a loud, strange voice, "and to my hundred sheep I am a savior."

And when the din of the angry shepherds about him slackened, Amos pointed to his hundred.

"See my flock," he said. "See the fright of them. The fear of the bright angel and of the voices is still upon them. God is busy in Bethlehem. He has not time for a hundred sheep. They are my sheep. I will abide."

This the others did not take so much amiss, for they saw that there was a terror in all the flocks and they, too, knew the ways of sheep. And before the shepherds departed on the road to Bethlehem toward the bright star, each talked to Amos and told him what he should do for the care of the several flocks.

And yet one or two turned back a moment to taunt Amos, before they reached the dip in the road which led to the City of David. It was said, "We shall see new glories at the throne of God, and you, Amos, you will see sheep."

Amos paid no heed, for he thought to himself, "One shepherd the less will not matter at the throne of God." Nor did he have time to be troubled that he was not to see the Child who was come to save the world.

There was much to be done among the flocks and Amos walked between the sheep and made under his tongue a clucking noise, which was a way he had, and to his hundred and to the others it was a sound more fine and friendly than the voice of the bright angel.

Presently the animals ceased to tremble and they began to graze as the sun came up over the hill where the star had been.

"For sheep," said Amos to himself, "the angels shine too much. A shepherd is better."

WITH the morning the others came up the road from Bethlehem, and they told Amos of the manger and of the wise men who had mingled there with shepherds. And they described to him the gifts: gold, frankincense and myrrh. And when they were done they said, "And did you see wonders here in the fields with the sheep?"

Amos told them, "Now my hundred are one hundred and one," and he showed them a lamb which had been born just before dawn.

"Was there for this a great voice out of heaven?" asked the eldest of the shepherds.

Amos shook his head and smiled, and there was upon his face that which [illegible] a wonder even in a night of wonders.

"To my heart," he said, "there came a whisper."

OF BOOKS AND BRENTANO'S

For novices and aficionadas, music is a release. At holiday time, it goes hand in hand with the meaning of the season. Children, surely, associate Christmas, for example, with the traditional hymns as well as with "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer." And in times of tension, we are told, music more than ever becomes an important release for the national consciousness. Here are some new and exciting books on music, recommended for Christmas by Brentano's . . . THE MUSICAL EXPERIENCE: OF COMPOSER, PERFORMER, LISTENER ($2.50) is a perceptive analysis of the creative activity of the composer, performer and listener, by Critic Roger Sessions.

Music depends for its integrity, he says, upon each participant sharing the experience. A fine gift for music-lovers . . . An attractive, non-technical set for everyone is THE LITTLE MUSIC LIBRARY ($2.50 per set), eight boxed volumes on such topics as symphonic favorites, great composers, musical terms and related anecdotes . . . Read (or better, give!) the first and only biography of one of the most glamorous and beloved figures in musical history. FRITZ KREISLER ($5.00) is the life story and musical story of the great violinist, often told in his own delightful words . . . John Erskine has written the complete story of his lifelong devotion to music and musical accomplishment in MY LIFE IN MUSIC ($3.50). For the first time, he tells the full story of the intriguing development of the Juillard School and the Metropolitan Opera . . . Youngsters like music books, too! Browse through your neighborhood Brentano's for some of the beautifully illustrated collections of children's songs, hymns and folk music!

Infectious Mozart Score Well Done

By Richard L. Coe

MOZART'S infectiously gay "Marriage of Figaro" music comes through the Plaza screen beautifully. It's been filmed by members of the Berlin State Opera, with Erna Berger singing the sprightly maid, and while it's a long, often static movie, those who relish the joyous score should be immensely pleased.

Though great largesse has been expended on the scenery and costumes, the accent is on the opera's music itself and the appeal is frankly toward a movie-opera public.

However, it may come as a great surprise to those who know little about this comedy of Beaumarchais just how naughty it really is. The characters are upper-crust Spaniards with not a thought in their heads except good old Sex. When the French playwright, born Pierre Augustin Caron, wrote this comedy it took him three years to secure permission for a public performance because Louis XIV (later to lose his head) thought it was too bawdy for words, containing as it does, a satire on social conditions just prior to the French revolution and finding that servants had far more intelligence than their betters.

Actually, the "Marriage" was the second of three Figaro stories and Mozart wrote his opera 30 years before Rossini set "The Barber of Seville" to music, which chronologically, comes first, though French and Italian composers had tackled "The Barber" with less lasting success shortly after its appearance as a play.

If all this strikes you as inordinately complex background, it is clarity itself compared with the story of Mozart's opera. In a nutshell, this concerns Figaro's efforts to marry the ward and maid of Rosina, who, in the first Figaro story had such a time marrying Count Almaviva. Now Almaviva is up to his flirtatious old tricks, wavers between insisting on or giving up his wedding night droit-de-siegneur, which leads Figaro into all sorts of plots to protect his bride.

Every so often the translator of the Plaza's English subtitles seems to wash his hands of the entire complicated yarn and one sits back grateful for Mozart's marvellously witty music.

Myra Hess at Piano

This is well recorded by European standards and beautifully sung. The laughing melodies of the second act finale, with its wildly complex plot (who was the man in the Countess' room? What's happened to Cherubno, the page boy? And there's the gardner's accusation, Figaro's idea that the latter's been drinking) is hilarious listening and amusing watching.

THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO. A Deta production of the Mozart opera; staged with the Berlin State Opera House company and the Berlin State orchestra by George Wildhagen; English subtitles by Nicholas Napoli. At the Plaza.

THE CAST

Susanna	Angelika Hauff
	Erna Berger
Figaro	Willi Domgraf-Fassbender
Countess Rosina	Sabine Peters
The Count	Mathieu Ahlersmeyer
Marcellina	Elsa Wagner
Dr. Bartolo	Victor Jansen
Cherubino	Willi Puhlmann
Barbarina	Ursula Meyburg
Basilio	Alfred Dalthoff

Apart from Miss Berger (Angelika Hauff plays the role, with the soprano's voice dubbed in), the cast seems filled with people who know what they're doing. Willi Domgraf-Fassbender has been singing Figaro for years, does it again and Mathiew Ahlersmeyer is fine as Almaviva. While the pace is on the operatic side, this shouldn't disturb the opera fans, since it's for them the picture's been made anyway.

The Plaza's short subject finds Dame Myra Hess playing the first movement of Beethoven's Appassionata Sonata, finally recorded and with the camera keeping its mind on its business. Dame Myra's forceful eloquent artistry.

THE TRANS-LUX announces a special free showing for "Macbeth" next Saturday morning, free that is, to those who contribute one or more cans of food to the Jim Gibbons WMAL Country Store in front of the theater these pre-Yule days . . . The audience will be interviewed during Jim's town clock program at 8:30 . . . The store collects food and toys for needy in the area.

LAWRENCE LANGNER takes note of this column's remarks that the prime trouble with the theater today is the admission price . . . "Isn't this," he asks, "an appropriate moment to mention that the Theater Guild shows, which are the best on the road, give a discount of at least 10 percent, while the tickets are mailed and best seats available to subscribers? Since you have spanked the entire American theater on the question of costs, don't you think you should award a slight order of merit to the Guild and its associated theaters?" . . . Consider the award made, Mr. L, as well as a reminder that your offices in the Raleigh are offering Christmas gift subscriptions to the remaining four plays on the Gayety series list . . . The number to call is DIstrict 2433.

A RECENT sensation at the Pix, "International Burlesque" will be getting its only northeast showing starting tomorrow at the Atlas, where it will stick around through Friday.

THE GREET Dramatic Academy will present four one-act plays tonight at 8:15 in Pierce Hall, 15th and Harvard sts., with the students directed by Maurice Greet and Mildred Coleman.

MARION D. VENABLE'S "National Ballet," not to be confused with the National Ballet Theater now completing its triumphant tour of Europe, will perform tomorrow night at Constitution Hall under sponsorship of the D.A.R.

SHAW'S to the fore . . . "Pygmalion" enters its final week tonight at Arena Stage . . . The movie versions of it and "Major Barbara" are on the National's screen . . . And tonight the University of Maryland Players open a week's run in "Caesar and Cleopatra" at the campus auditorium, with Douglas Williams, Joan Kendel, Bernard Works and Jean Nyberg in the leads under Rudy Pugliese's direction.

OPENING TONIGHT: "The Consul" at the Gayety, with Patricia Neway and Marie Powers in the roles they created in Gian-Carl Menotti's prize-winning music drama.

CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER will be playing a week of her unique monodramas and character sketches at the Gayety opening January 8 . . . This deftly witty personality will indeed be welcome, for it's some years since she's shown us those figures of current and historical vividness which no other player has been able to match in popular esteem; her week's program hasn't been announced, but whatever of her many people she brings, you'll find them as entertaining as her vignettes in The New Yorker.

Blanket of Snow Scheduled

ginia State Police said motorists were "merely crawling along" on U. S. 1.

Buses between Richmond and Washington on U. S. 1, were running two to three hours late.

District police were kept busy throughout the period before midnight handling scores of accidents. Most of them were minor, involving bumped fenders. Chains were put on all Metropolitan police cars during the early part of the evening.

The American Automobile Association reported that trouble calls started pouring in shortly before 7 p. m. Most of them were for cars which had skidded off into ditches or because of starter or battery trouble.

William A. Xanten, Superintendent of the District Division of Sanitation, said last night that several of the District's snow plows were being readied but it was doubtful that they would have to be used. The snow removal force is not put to work if the snowfall does not reach over three inches, he said.

The snow storm was not severe enough to affect travel at Washington National Airport, a spokesman there said. Planes were able to land and take off but were delayed because of the usual Sunday night heavy traffic, he added.

Harder hit than the Washington area were northwestern Virginia and western Maryland. The weather forecaster said snow there should reach at least 5 inches by early morning.

The Virginia State police dispatcher at Culpeper, who handles police radio calls for 18 counties in northern Virginia, reported traffic was paralyzed in most of that area, where 4 inches of snow had fallen by 8:30 p. m. He called the traffic jam the "worst in 10 years."

The weather forecaster said the warm air on the fringe of a storm moving north along the eastern coast from the Carolinas resulted in the snow changing partially to rain and sleet during the early evening. He predicted that cold air moving in from the northwest would change it back to pure snow by midnight.

Holiday Trip Off After Laborer Is Robbed of $300

A holiday trip was cancelled for Samuel D. Reardon, 49, Saturday night when two bandits robbed him of $300 he set aside for the trip.

Reardon, a laborer, who lives at 1526 U st. nw., told police the two men, one masked and the other armed with a gun, approached him as he was leaving his parked car at 6th and W sts. nw. to visit friends about 6:30 p. m.

While one held the gun on him, the other took the money from his wallet, he said. He told police he had cashed $300 worth of postal savings stamps earlier in the day to pay for a holiday trip.

Brosius Will Address Businessmen's Lunch

William Brosius, jr., former director of the Maryland Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be the principal speaker at a luncheon for businessmen at Lee House, 15th and L sts. nw., Wednesday at 12:30 p. m.

Philip W. Amram, Washington attorney, also will speak at the luncheon, which is sponsored by the United World Federalists, Inc. Reservations may be made by calling EX. 0892 before 4 p. m., December 11.

Browns Lace Redskins, 45 to 21, Play Giants for Title; Scarborough, Wight Traded to Bosox in Five-Player Deal

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 10.—Faces fell in profusion late this afternoon when the news of the Red Sox-White Sox five-player deal ricocheted around the lobby of baseball headquarters in St. Pete. First to react was Mr. Red Rolfe, who is managing the Detroit Tigers with hopes of winning the pennant in '51.

At the news that the Red Sox had wangled Pitchers Ray Scarborough and Bill Wight from Chicago, Rolfe emitted a long, low moan. "That makes it rugged," he said. "Ugh."

POVICH

His feelings were plain enough. Rolfe didn't want the Red Sox shoring up their pitching staff, a weakness which had cost them the last two pennants. Rolfe would have liked to continue to battle the Red Sox in a sort of status quo.

The Detroit manager was even more expressive after a bit more reflection. At the same time, he was able to aim a barb at the recent failures of the Red Sox. "If they don't win the pennant now, they'd better give up."

MR. BUCKY HARRIS, who watches these things closely, was equally unhappy when he came by the information that the Red Sox had picked up a pair of pitchers, and gave up Outfielder Al Zarilla in the swap. Harris' concern, unlike Rolfe's, did not stem from the probability that the Red Sox might beat his team out for the pennant.

"That kills us, I guess," said Harris mournfully.

He was speaking figuratively, of course. The Nats' manager intends to remain very much alive, but imagines he will have to abandon what has been one of his pet projects—the acquisition of either Johnny Pesky or Vern Stephens from the Red Sox.

"When they give up Zarilla to the White Sox, it means that they have to pull Billy Goodman off third base and play him in the outfield," said Harris. "And then they don't have that extra infielder I thought we might get."

FOR GENERAL MANAGER George Weiss of the Yankees, the Boston-Chicago deal was defeat for one of his own projects. For weeks now, Weiss had been huddling with General Manager Frank Lane of the White Sox in an effort to swing a deal that would land him either Wight or Scarborough, both of whom are now safely beyond his reach.

The proposition offered by the Yankees was: The White Sox could have their pick of two of four Yankee pitchers (Tom Ferrick, Jack Sanford, Joe Page, Joe Ostrowski) plus Outfielder Cliff Mapes, for either Wight or Scarborough. But when the Red Sox came along to offer Pitchers Joe Dobson and Dick Littlefield and Outfielder Zarilla, Lane was disenchanted with the Yankee proposal.

Owner Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox promptly denied that any cash passed in the deal. "And who should get the cash, us or the White Sox?" he countered. "Also, why do you imagine that there was some cash involved?"

The answer to that last query was quick: "Anybody can always get cash from the Red Sox," Yawkey was reminded by his interviewer.

THAT THE RED SOX some day would wind up with Scarborough was as certain as sunrise. They've been coveting him for three years now, in an attempt to get him off their necks. Perhaps it was on the proposition that if they couldn't beat him, they might do better joining him.

Back in September of 1948, Scarborough beat the Red Sox out of the pennant by beating 'em with a four-hitter. And a year to the day later, he beat 'em again on behalf of the Nats to knock them out of another pennant by a one-game margin.

In fact, Scarborough holds a 12-6 record against the Red Sox for his major league career, and thus their interest in getting him into this organization is obvious.

Just by way of showing he still held his charm over the Red Sox last season, Scarborough beat 'em on one occasion with a three-hit shutout.

The paradox is that today the Red Sox traded away in the exchange Mr. Al Zarilla, who got all three of Boston's hits on that particular dark day against Scarborough.

Chisox Get Al Zarilla, Dobson and Littlefield

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 10.—The Red Sox and White Sox suddenly popped the first deal of the major league trading sessions today with a five-player transaction that moved pitchers Ray Scarborough and Bill Wight to the Boston club.

In return the White Sox came into possession of outfielder Al Zarilla and pitchers Joe Dobson and Dick Littlefield. Representatives of both teams denied any cash consideration was involved.

The trade as finally struck represented a compromise by the Red Sox, who originally held out for Scarborough and southpaw Bill Pierce but accepted lefthander Wight.

To make the deal, the Red Sox were forced to give up one of their regular outfielders in Zarilla, a .325 hitter last season, plus a 15-game winner in the veteran Dobson. Littlefield, rookie lefthander from Birmingham, won two and lost two for Boston last season.

It was the culmination of the Red Sox's efforts to acquire Scarborough for the last three years. In 1948 and 1949, the former Washington righthander was Boston's No. 1 baseball villain after beating the Red Sox in crucial games that cost them a pair of pennants.

Going to the White Sox in June last season with Eddie Robinson and Al Kozar in the deal that brought Cass Michaels, Bob Kuzava and Johnny Ostrowski to the Nats, Scarborough wound up with a record of 13 wins, 18 defeats. He is 32.

Wight had a record of 10 wins, 18 defeats for the sixth-place White Sox in 1950. Now 28, he has been regarded as one of the better lefthanders in the league.

He has a great motion to first base that traps off many runners. He worked 30 games last year for a 3.53 earned run mark.

The Yanks sent Wight to Chicago in February of 1948 with Pitcher Fred Bradley and Catcher Aaron Robinson for Pitcher Eddie Lopat.

The White Sox's need of outfielders dictated the deal, declared new Manager Paul Richards who approved the trade that was engineered by Lane.

"We couldn't go along with our kind of outfielding," said Richards. "I know about Zarilla. I played against him a few years back and he always was underrated. He'll be the best outfielder on our club."

The White Sox turned to the Boston Club in its trade talk after unsatisfactory dickering with the Yankees, who also sought one of their pitchers.

In acquiring the 33-year-old Dobson, the White Sox are pleased that they got rid of a pitching hex of their own. Going into the 1950 season, they had been Dobson's pet victims. In his career he had won 14 decisions over Chicago, lost only four.

The deal also put something of a quietus on the Red Sox's trade talk with the Washington club which is seeking one of their extra infielders and was offering Sid Hudson in a swap for Johnny Pesky. Zarilla's departure now calls for Boston to take Billy Goodman off third base, play him in the right field spot.

The Nats haven't abandoned hope of doing business with Boston however. But their hopes have been scaled down to the point that they must talk business now for Vern Stephens, not Johnny Pesky. The latter is being retained for third base duty by the Sox.

Nats, Red Sox 'Close to a Deal'

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 10. The Nats and the Red Sox are "close to a deal" that probably will be announced tomorrow, The Washington Post learned tonight.

Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats and Owner Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox were in a huddle until past midnight. Only the approval of Washington President Clark Griffith is holding up the announcement.

There is no inkling as to the players involved, but the current guess is that the Nats are seeking Shortstop Vern Stephens in exchange for a pitcher, maybe Sid Hudson. Sam Dente, Nats shortstop, also may figure in the deal.

Blanda's Field Goals Defeat Detroit, 6-3

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 (AP).—George Blanda lofted two field goals off the mud of Wrigley Field to give the Chicago Bears a 6-3 National Football League triumph over the Detroit Lions today and push them into a divisional title playoff with the Rams in Los Angeles next Sunday.

The Bears, like the Lions, stymied in the air and on the half-frozen turf every time they approached the goal, called on "Mule" Blanda's magic toe to kick them over the hump.

While 34,793 cheering customers watched, including many Bear "alumni" in town for Coach George Halas' annual party, Blanda booted a 41-yard field goal at the outset of the second period and a 22-yard clincher in the first 2½ minutes of the fourth.

In snapping the Lions' four-game winning streak, the Bears tied the Rams with nine wins and three losses to set up the National conference championship playoff next Sunday.

The two divisional winners will

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP).—J. W. Porter, husky teen-age Oakland, Calif., American Legion baseball player, has received "in excess" of $50,000 for signing with the Chicago White Sox.

Geri Sets Two Records as Steelers Win

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 10 (AP).—Flashy Joe Geri broke two all-time Pittsburgh team records while passing and running the Steelers to a 28-7 victory over the Chicago Cardinals today before 18,301 fans at Forbes Field.

Geri scored 64 points this season—10 of them today—to break the old record of 56 set by Joe Glamp in 1948.

The Steeler halfback also gained 78 yards rushing to bring his season total to 705. The record was 696 set by Bullet Bill Dudley in 1942.

Geri shared honors for the day with Quarterback Joe Gasparella, who threw two touchdown passes.

The victory gave the Steelers a tie with Philadelphia for third place in the American division of the National Football League.

New Yorkers Beat Eagles, Tie for Crown

By Russ Green

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10 (AP).—The New York Giants gained a tie for the National Football League's American Division title today as they edged the Philadelphia Eagles, 9 to 7, in a wild, bruising battle at Shibe Park.

By winning, the Giants ended the regular season with 10 victories and two losses, the same record as the Cleveland Indians who today defeated Washington, 45-21. They'll play it off in Cleveland next Sunday.

A crowd of 24,440 saw the game on a dark, bitter cold day that produced snow and forced the second half to be played under lights.

All the scoring in this teeth-jarring clash was produced in the first half as Randy Clay booted a 15-yard field goal and Charley Conerly pitched a 5-yard touchdown pass for the Giants in the first period and Tommy Thompson threw a 36-yard touchdown for the Eagles in the second quarter.

As for the Dethroned NFL champion Eagles, it was their sixth defeat of the season and fourth in a row. It must be said that the 1950 injury-ridden Philadelphia squad lost five games by a total of 18 points. They ended the campaign tied for third place in the American Conference.

Bitter feelings were evident on the snow swept gridiron with players pairing off on more than one occasion in fist-throwing antics. The high feelings were brought to a fever pitch in the third period when Tackle Jay MacDowell picked up a Giant fumble on the New York 21 and lumbered 79 yards for what looked like a touchdown.

But at this point, Referee Emil Heintz called the Eagles on a clipping penalty and set the play back to the New York 46. The fans booed and after the game accosted Heintz in the runway to the dressing room. Police rescued the official from the fans' wrath.

The Giants scored first after seven and one-half minutes of the opening quarter. Tom Landry intercepted Thompson's pass to give the Giants possession at midfield. Operating from the A-formation, Conerly flipped 39 yards to McChesney for a first down on the Eagles' 11.

Three minutes later the Giants were in the scoring column again. Steve Van Buren, who was honored with a host of gifts including a new automobile before the game, fumbled and Arnie Weinmeister pounced on the loose ball on the Eagles' 31.

Conerly passed for 25 yards to McChesney for a first down on the Philadelphia 6. Three smashes by Price found the ball on the five, so Conerly threw one to McChesney, standing all alone in the end zone. Clay's conversion try was blocked and the Giants led, 9 to 0.

Graham Flips For 4 Scores In 23 Pass Completions

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Marion Motley got the pitch from the officials for fighting yesterday and the Redskins got it from Otto Graham, who pitched his Cleveland Browns to a 45-21 victory at Griffith Stadium.

In a swirling snowstorm, Quarterback Graham completed 23 passes, four for touchdowns, as the four-time champs of the defunct All-America Conference finished their first season in the expanded National Football League tied with the New York Giants for the Eastern Division title.

The two teams battle it out in Cleveland next Sunday. The Giants, who inflicted the only two losses the Browns suffered this year, whipped the Eagles in Philadelphia yesterday to qualify for the playoff.

Graham gave the crowd of 30,745, the largest of the season, one of the finest passing exhibitions Washington has ever seen.

His passes rolled up 321 of Cleveland's 474 yards. He completed nine in a row in one stretch of the third period when the Redskins began to fall apart after putting up a terrific scuffle against the favored visitors.

Browns Take Lead in 3d Period

Oddly enough, Graham was on the bench when the beginning of the end of the Redskins good fight came in the closing minutes of the third quarter with the score tied for the third time, 21-21.

Sammy Baugh, whose 6-yard pass to Charlie Justice gave the Redskins a lead in the first quarter, attempted to pass to Justice again this time. His toss was partially deflected and Warren Lahr, a defensive halfback for the Browns, caught it after a tussle with Justice in which both fell to the ground.

Lahr got up and ran 18 yards for the touchdown which shot the Browns ahead for the first time but for keeps.

The game became a rout after that with the Browns scoring two more touchdowns and a field goal in the last quarter to salt away their second win over the Redskins this season and their 10th in 12 regular season games this year.

Motley Banished as Half Ends

For the Redskins, who along with the Browns won all five of the pre-season games, it ended a dismal season which saw Coach Herman Ball's hopefuls beat the Baltimore Colts twice and the Pittsburgh Steelers for their only successes.

Until Lahr raced for the tie-breaking touchdown with the intercepted pass, it was a slashing, viciously played game, as hard fought as any ever played here. Tempers flared and many times the high-strung players appeared ready to forget the game and turn it into a back-alley roughhouse.

Motley, the bruising 230-pound Browns' fullback, was tossed out on the last play of the first half when he elbowed Gene Pepper, 240-pound Redskins' guard after the Missourian had tackled him.

Several Redskins and an equal number of Browns rushed to the scene of the unscheduled hostilities but Carl Rebel, a back judge, separated the warriors, ordering Motley out of the game.

Not only was Graham's passing sensational, but his play-calling was top drawer, too. He crossed up the Redskins' defensive plans, which were geared to stop the

Caps Fall Behind in 2d Period And Never Catch Up to Pistons

Ft. Wayne Romps, 97-81

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Dec. 10.—Washington's Caps ran into a red-hot Fort Wayne team here tonight and were beaten, 97-81, for their second loss on the Fort Wayne court this season.

Tight defense by the Pistons and excellent short shooting, mainly by Boag Johnson, were too much for the Caps, whose poor second period set them back so far they were unable to catch up.

Fort Wayne led only 19-17, at the end of the first period but the Caps couldn't connect in the second quarter and only the fact that Bill Sharman netted 10 points kept them in the game at all.

Sharp shooting Fred Scolari made three quick baskets in the first period but never made another the rest of the evening.

The Caps trailed at the half, 42-31, and at the third period, 69-49.

Rookie Allen Sawyer, and Dick Schnittker kept Fort Wayne from pulling farther away.

Johnson, scoring mostly from far out had nine field goals and two free throws for 20 points. Schnittker led the Caps with 18.

Caps Put Gilmur On Inactive List

Coach Bones McKinney yesterday reduced his Caps squad to the required 10-man player limit by placing Chuck Gilmur, veteran forward, on the inactive list.

Gilmur is resting an injured knee, but will be retained by the Caps. The Caps are scheduled for two games at Uline Arena this week. They oppose Coach Red Auerbach's Boston Celtics Wednesday and the Philadelphia Warriors Saturday night.

Albert Leads 49ers, 30-14, Over Packers

By Russ Newland

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 10 (AP).—Southpaw Quarterback Frank Albert led the San Francisco Forty-Niners to a 30-to-14 victory over the Green Bay Packers here today in the final game of the season for the two National Football League rivals.

A crowd of 20,797 saw the Forty-Niners turn the tables on the team that beat them in the snow at Green Bay two weeks ago.

The Forty-Niners scored a touchdown and field goal in the first period to take the lead; pushed over two more touchdowns in the second, and tallied once in the final quarter.

Green Bay went into the lead at the start on a brilliant touchdown pass from Quarterback Tobin Rote to Halfback Billy Grimes, with the latter racing 96 yards.

Green Bay's lead was short-lived however. Albert mixed up his plays to work the ball 63 yards for the 49ers' first touchdown. Right Half John Strzykalski ran the last 7 yards.

A little later, Gordon Soltau booted a 21-yard field goal to give the 49ers a 10-7 advantage. They counted again in the second period, going 37 yards after recovering a Packer fumble. Albert passed tot Fullback Joe Perry for the last 10 yards.

Another San Francisco touchdown was chalked up with less than a minute to go in the first half when Perry smashed through the line, got into the open, and ran 77 yards.

Green Bay made its other touchdown in the third period after Bob Summerhays had recovered a fumble on the San Francisco 49-yard line. Rote completed three passes, one to Bob Mann, end, good for 40 yards. With the ball 3 yards from the goal, Rote tossed one tto Steve Pritko in the end zone.

New York Ends Loss Streak at 4

By Murray Rose

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP).—The New York Yanks closed out the most successful season ever for a Ted Collins-owned team today by routing the hapless Baltimore Colts, 51-14, in a National Football League game before a slim, chilled paid crowd of 5,003 at Yanakee Stadium.

The win broke a four-game losing streak for the Yanks and enabled them to finish with a 7-5 record. Baltimore lost its fifth in a row and closed with a dismal 1-11 mark. Besides finishing over the .500 mark, the Yanks lost only about $150,000 this season, another new low for Collins, who is accustomed to blowing his cash in heftier bubbles.

The Yanks got a two-touchdown jump in the first period, held a 21-14 lead at the half as Baltimore rallied for two second-quarter touchdowns on Y. A. Tittle's passing and bucking, and then sewed up the game with another two-touchdown spurt in the third period.

The Tittle-to-Paul Salata passing combination set up the two Colt scores. Tittle then bucked three yards for the first and six inches for the other.

Five Yanks scored touchdowns with Zolly Toth and George Taliaferro getting two apiece. Art Weiner, Joe Golding and Sherman Howard tallied the others. A fourth-quarter safety and Chet Adams' seven conversions accounted for the other Yanks points.

Howard started the Yanks' scoring in the first frame with a 53-yard burst through the line. One minute 28 seconds later George Ratterman passed 14 yards to Weiner for the second score.

A 57-yard ground march, with Toth bucking over from the 2, gave the Yanks their third tally in the second frame.

Golding widened New York's lead to 28-14 by snaring a Tittle pass and racing 35 yards to score. Shortly afterward Taliaferro swept to the right for 27 yards and a tally.

Jim Champon tackled Adrian Burk in the Baltimore end zone for a safety in the final quarter. Two touchdown passes, Johnny Rauch to Taliaferro and Toth wrapped up the scoring. The first went 10 yards and the second 15.

meet December 24 in the East for the league crown.

The victory was quite a boost to the morale of Blanda. The third-string quarterback from Kentucky was traded to the Baltimore Colts during the summer then brought back to the Bears in their second game of the season.

Bobby Layne, the former Bear quarterback dealt to Detroit, did not have time to get cold in the 20-degree temperature. He tried 43 passes and completed 16 for 166 yards. His longest connection was 48 yards to Behemoth Leon Hart to set up Doak Walker's 17-yard field goal midway in the second period.

Walker's boot gave him 128 points for the season, 10 shy of matching the league record set by Green Bay's Don Hutson in 1942.

Walker attempted three field goals in all. He missed from 41 and 27 yards in the first quarter. Blanda made two out of three tries, missing at 42 yards in the second.

Johnny Lujack also tried a field goal for the Bears late in the third from the 22, but the kick fizzled out of bounds and the Lions took over on their own 1-inch line.

Sid Luckman, the Bears' veteran quarterback, saw his most service of the season today. He completed four out of 13 tosses for 38 yards, Lujack hit on nine out of 22 for 107.

Led by John Hoffman's 48 yards in four smashes, the Bears gained 135 yards rushing. Ollie Cline gained 29 yards in 10 carries and Layne 34 in nine to lead the Lions' rushing total of 84.

powerful smashes of Motley, by handing off to the hulking Negro fullback only four times in the first half.

Instead, he used his two fleet halfbacks, Dub Jones and Rex Bumbardner, for his ground attack, which netted another 154 yards for a grand total of 474 yards.

But it wasn't on the ground where the Redskins were licked. In the face of Graham's passes, which were lofty floaters that many sandlot kids throw, the Redskin pass defense apparently melted in the snow which was melting itself before hitting the stadium turf.

Ends MacSpeedie and Dante Lavelli and Halfbacks Jones and Bumgardner were faking the Redskin defenders out of their shoes with their button-hooking and stop-and-go tactics.

Phelps Runs 54 Yards

Five of the six Cleveland touchdowns came on passes. Graham threw four of them, Baugh one. The only touchdown on a run was a 54-yard punt return by Dopey Phelps for the last touchdown of the game.

The Browns really didn't need the score but they probably just let Phelps go all the way to show they didn't have to rely on Graham, and Graham alone, to produce touchdowns for them.

Graham completed touchdown passes of 21 yards to Jones in the second quarter, a 35-yarder to Bumgardner to tie the score at 14-14-all at intermission, a 29-yarder to Jones to knot the count at 21-21 in the third quarter, and his fourth and last to Alex Groza, on a tackle-eligible play, for a 23-yard score.

Groza also kicked a 12-yard field goal in the fourth quarter and converted after each of the six Browns touchdowns for a 15-point day.

Until the third-period crackup, the Redskins were a first-rate football team. They took the opening kickoff and moved 74 yards for a tally with Baugh pitching 6 yards to Justice for the 6-pointer. Two other Baugh passes, both to Hugh Taylor, picked up 44 yards during the excursion.

With Harry Gilmer, making his first appearance in three weeks, at the helm, the Redskins bolted into a 14-7 lead in the second quarter after the Graham-to-Jones pass had tied the score early in the period.

Completes 9 Straight Passes

Gilmer and Taylor collaborated on a 51-yard scoring sortie. Three minutes before halftime, however, Graham took over again.

On four straight passes, he moved the Browns 80 yards for the tieing tally. Bumgardner, standing all alone on the Redskins' 10, tucked in Otto's 25-yard pass to knot the count.

But the crowd hadn't seen anything from Graham yet, as they were to find out in the next quarter. Bill Dudley gave the Redskins a 21-14 lead by racing around end for a 23-yard touchdown after Graham had his only pass of the day intercepted, a theft accredited to Joe Bartos on the Bowns' 37-yard line.

On nine straight passes, Graham pitched the Browns 62 yards and into a tie with five minutes of the quarter remaining. He actually threw 10 during the drive, but he was rushed on his first one and drew a penalty for intentionally grounding the ball, which he most certainly did.

But that great Cleveland line,

Graham Tosses Four Touchdowns

which provided Graham with great protection all day, didn't let that happen again and Graham pitched to Lavelli, speedie, Jones, Bumgardner and finally Jones again to tie the score.

Shortly after that, Lahr tucked in Baugh's pass for another Cleveland touchdown and moments later the complete "Brownout" of the Redskins started.

Busy Week Starts Tonight

A.U. Plays Penn State, W & M Visits Terps

Area colleges go big time in a big way with their basketball schedules this week.

Tonight the American University Eagles place their three-game undefeated record on the line against Penn State and Thursday the high-riding Hoya sophomores travel to Madison Square Garden to tangle with Long Island University in the key contest of a week of frenzied activity.

Sixteen games are on area teams' schedules between tonight and Saturday.

Staff Cassell, coach of American University, who scouted Penn State against Syracuse Saturday night when the Nittany Lions led all the way only to lose in the last minute, 61-59, let a cautious note of optimism into his pregame prediction.

"Penn State is not as tall as we are and not as experienced," he said. "If we have a good night I think we can beat them."

Three AU first-stringers, Sherwood Webster, Art Morales and Leroy Ishman, have averages of 16 points or better per game for their first three contests. Webster's average is 20 points per game, Ishman's 18, and Morales' 16.

As the opener of tonight's doubleheader at the AU gym, Wilson Teachers meet Towson Teachers. Wilson is favored over Towson, which has four losses against two victories.

Georgetown journeys to Mount St. Mary's tonight to try for its third straight victory of the season. The contest should not prove much more than a brisk tune-up for Thursdays Garden go for Coach Buddy O'Grady's red hot sophomores.

George Washington University meets two top apponents here this week: Temple Tuesday night and the University of Virginia Friday night. Both games are at Uline Arena.

Maryland entertains William and Mary at College Park tonight in the Terps' first Southern Conference struggle.

After losing a practice game to Quantico, Maryland has beaten Virginia and lost to Penn. The game starts at 8:15. At 6:15 the Terp Frosh meet Loyola of Baltimore's Frosh.

Dear Folks:

Leeds Riley, assistant to the president here, probably has had more experience with keeping a track raceable in winter than any other man in the sport. The other night rain, followed by snow flurries and the possibility of a freeze, presented problems for Riley and Track Supt. John Brisco. Leeds was up most of the night. In the morning the track was in good shape and Riley was in bad shape from lack of sleep. Willie Postal, local jack-of-all-trades, cracked, "Why do you worry so much about the track, Leeds? The track apparently doesn't worry about you." By the way, since its opening in 1933, Charles Town never has been forced to call off December racing because of bad weather. The only shutdown, oddly enough, came as the result of a bright sunshine and a sudden thaw. See you at the rail.

Cooper, Harmon Beat Turnesa, Douglas in Miami 4-Ball Golf Final

They Take Lead on 15th, Win, 1 Up

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP).—Pete Cooper and Claude Harmon today won the $10,000 Miami International Four-Ball golf tournament, defeating Dave Douglas and Jim Turnesa in the 36-hole finals, 1 up.

Cooper, of Ponte Vedra, Fla., and Harmon, of Palm Beach, Fla., went into the lead on the fifteenth hole and were never headed.

They went 2 up on the first hole of the afternoon round on Harmon's 5-foot birdie putt but Douglas, of Newark, Del., and Turnesa, of Briarcliff, N. Y., trimmed the margin to 1 up on the fifth with a par 4.

The Cooper-Harmon duo maintained the advantage to the end. Harmon dropped a 15 footer on the final hole for a birdie 3 and conceded Douglas a birdie to halve the hole.

The winners received $1250 each and the runners-up got $750 each. The victory brought Cooper's winnings for the year to $17,880.

Cooper and Harmon carded 36 birdies, one eagle and went one over par on three of the 118 holes they played.

They had a best ball score of 65 on the morning round to Douglas and Turnesa's 66. Each had 67s on the afternoon round. Par for the 6347-yard Miami Country Club course is 36-36—72.

Cooper and Harmon defeated Bob Toski, Northampton, Mass., and Toney Penna, Cincinnati, Ohio, 2 and 1 yesterday to reach the finals. Douglas and Turnesa upset the favored team of Cary Middlecoff, Ormond Beach, Fla., and Ed (Porky) Oliver, Seattle, Wash., one-up on the eighteenth green to get in today's match.

Los Angeles Awarded Olympic Meet

The 1952 Olympic track and field tryouts were awarded to Los Angeles yesterday by the Olympic Committee meeting here as part of of the AAU convention.

Avery Brundage, president of United States Olympics, Inc., said that Los Angeles was chosen from a list of cities asking to be scene of the tryouts. They probably will be held early in July—just before the 1952 Olympics are scheduled in Helsinki, Finland.

Brundage said the fact that the championship meets of the Amateur Athletic Union and the National Collegiate Athletic Associations are to be held that year on the West Coast was a factor in the selection of Los Angeles.

In other actions the AAU announced that its 1951 Women's Basketball Tourney will be held in Dallas on March 14-16. Dallas, with a new $500,000 sports structure, outbid St. Josephs, Mo.

The United States Olympic Committee admitted that its proposed plan to send a 114-man track and field team to South America this summer is "in jeopary" because of lack of public response to an appeal for funds.

The committee said that only $19,000 of a necessary $220,000 has actually been raised to meet the team's expenses. J. Lyman Bingham, committee member, said that both President Truman and the State Department have encouraged the effort to send a team because the "good will" aspects of the trip were important to "solidify the Western Hemisphere."

His Big Chance

Coley Wallace Fights Spagnolo Tonight

Tonight is a big night for Coley Wallace, sensational young heavyweight boxer.

The 22-year-old law student takes on Duilio Spagnolo in the 10-round main event at Turner's Arena.

Spagnolo

It will be strictly a "coming out" party for Wallace. He won the National Golden Gloves title in 1948 and his handlers have been nursing him along carefully. Against none-too-rugged competition Wallace has remained undefeated since turning pro and has amassed 10 knockouts.

Tonight's fight may be a different story, however. Spagnolo is a real toughie who won the heavyweight championship of Italy from Gino Buovino before coming to the United States a year ago.

The scrap will be watched with interest by fight promoters all over the country who are eager to see what Wallace can do against big league competition. If the New York lad can live up to his reputation, he seems a cinch to get a shot at the heavyweight championship as soon as he is ready for it.

Tonight's fight also is the first time that Wallace's handlers have allowed him to fight more than five rounds.

Spagnolo, a native of Milan, Italy, is a rough, experienced leather pusher who holds victories over a number of good boxers including Bernie Reynolds, a New England favorite. He has won 14 of his last 16 fights. Oddmakers are quoting Spagnolo a 6-5 favorite.

Two five-round bouts and three four-rounders are on the supporting card.

One of the fives is a rematch between Art Bethea and former All-Army Middleweight Champ Johnny Pratt. Two weeks ago Bethea kept Pratt tied up and outpointed him to earn a unanimous decision.

Gene Harley will meet Eddie Harris in the other five-rounder. Both are local middleweights.

In the four-round prelims Paddy Bullock meets Lightweight Jimmy Sewell; Bobby Bowen fights Welterweight Kid Stone, and another welterweight scrap brings together Billy Hickerson and Marvin Barefoot.

Ornstein's, Kingsmen Lead League Play

Ornstein's Construction Co. and the Kingsmen were tied for first place with four victories without defeat following play in the Jewish Community Center Basketball League yesterday.

Ornstein's defeated Arcade Pontiac, 57-43, the Kingsmen won over Hi G Paint, 43-37, Super Service Trash lost to the Columbia Tigers, 30-41, Camtops defeated the Dark Horses, 53-36, and the Beanbags won over Cardozo, 48-25.

Navy Crew Wins Frostbite Regatta, GW Is Fourth

Navy won the "Frostbite" regatta, held Saturday and yesterday on the Anacostia River, with 114 points. Last year's champs, George Washington University, finished a straggling fourth with 98.

Harvard was runerup with 108 points and another Ivy League entrant, Princeton, took third with 104. Catholic University was fifth with 87, Georgetown had 86, Maryland 53½, Dennison 44½ and the University of Toledo was last with 26.

The victory gave Navy the Byrd-Marvin-Gorman Trophy and Navy's Bill Lepthien was high point skipper in class A with 61 points. GW's Bob Harwood was second in class A with 56.

Tim Barclay of Princeton was class B high point skipper with 56 points, closely followed by Catholic's Don Street, who had 55.

Langdon Takes Metro Crown With 6-0 Victory

The Langdon Lions won the 160-pound Metro Football League championship for the second year in a row yesterday at Alexandria Municipal Stadium, defeating the Liberty Auto Body team, 6-0, on a soggy field.

Quarterback Hal White scored the game's only touchdown with a 51-yard punt return in the first quarter. Liberty was never able to penetrate Langdon's 30-yard line. Langdon's record for the season is six victories and one defeat in league play.

White was chosen as the "Most Valuable Player" in the game by Metro League officials watching the game.

Ballston Indians Win

The unlimited Ballston Indians basketball team defeated Bolling Air Force Base Headquarters Squadron team, 73-63, at Bolling yesterday.

Conference All-Stars Lose, 14-0

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 10 (AP). Quarterback Paul Rickards pitched a pair of first-half touchdown passes today which gave the Richmond Rebels a 14-0 win over the Southern Conference area All-Stars in a football game that started in rain, was pelted by hail and ended in a snowstorm.

The Rebels, champions of the American Football League for two straight seasons, pounded into the lead 4 minutes after the game got underway. They took the opening kickoff and bolted 71 yards for a touchdown which made everything after that an anticlimax.

Fred Cooper, Richmond's fullback, got off a 33-yard run on the opening drive and Halfback Lynn Chewning added a jaunt of 30 yards. Rickards finally accounted for the score with a 2-yard flip to End Dick Moje.

The Rebels tallied their second touchdown just before the halftime whistle. This time they went 80 yards in just six plays. Rickards completed a 17-yard pass to back Phil Colella and a 45-yard toss to back Bab Angle before an interference penalty set the All-Stars back on their 1-foot line. From there Rickards lobbed a pass to end Dick Hensley for the score.

The All-Stars, coached by Virginia's Art Guepe and Wake Forest's Richard Walker, had cracker-jack opportunities to score but lost out on all their chances.

DaGrosa Asks Ban for Louis

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 10 (AP).—John (Ox) Da Grosa, Pennsylvania athletic commissioner, said tonight he is starting a move to bar Joe Louis from boxing in this State and will petition the National Boxing Association to do likewise.

Da Grusa said Louis' fight with Freddie Beshore, scheduled for Detroit January 3 should be stopped for the "health, welfare and future" of Louis.

And, said Da Grosa, the halting of Louis' fistic career would be "in the best interests of boxing."

Meanwhile, in Detroit Louis was reported to have given up all hope of regaining the title.

Louis was quoted by Tommy Devine, Detroit Free Press sportswriter, as saying he is "not interested in meeting Ezzard Charles again."

The brown bomber, recently dethroned by Charles, told Devine that he:

1—Will fight a maximum of four more fights before retiring for good (he's already scheduled to fight Freddie Beshore, Tommy Gomez, and Rex Layne).

2—Definitely expects to retire "within the next four months."

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Klutts

This column is devoted today to questions and answers on Federal pay.

Q. I have permanent status. If I accept an indefinite appointment in a higher-grade position in a defense agency, will I be entitled to all the within-grade pay benefits I now have?

A. Yes. You may also receive a larger amount of money for periodic step increases; for example, a grade GS-4 step increase is $80 annually while a GS-5 is $125 annually.

Q. How many step increases may an employe receive in one grade and what is the actual salary increase?

A. That depends upon the grade you hold, regardless of whether you have a permanent or an indefinite appointment. General Schedule grades 2 through 10 all have six step increases reaching to the top of the grade; grades 11 through 15 have five step increases; and grades 16 and 17 have four. All CPO grades have six step increases. The increases for both CPC and GS grades range from $60 to $250, depending upon the grade.

Q. How often do these step increases occur?

A. For all grades of the CPC schedule and for the first 10 grades of the General Schedule, the step increases occur every 52 calendar weeks. For the grades GS-11 through GS-17, the increases occur every 78 calendar weeks.

Q. If I am in grade GS-7 and receive periodic step increases regularly, how long will it take me to reach the top of my grade?

A. It takes approximately six years of service to reach the top of that grade.

Q. I know that when an employe has reached the top of his pay grade he is not eligible for a periodic step increase or an increase as a reward for superior accomplishment. But if I have not reached the maximum rate for my grade, can I receive a step increase as a superior accomplishment award and a periodic step increase during the same year?

A. Yes. If the regular step increase for your grade is $125, the amount of the award will also be $125. You would have increased your salary by $250 during the year. In addition, any Federal worker can earn a cash award from his agency.

Q. What is the difference between a superior-accomplishment award and a cash award?

A. Superior-accomplishment awards are given for outstanding work, accomplishments or inventions which assist the Federal Government. These awards are audited by the Civil Service Commission and amount to a one-step increase in salary. These increases become a part of the worker's regular salary. However, he cannot receive a superior-accomplishment award if he has reached the top rate for his grade.

Cash awards are usually given for adopted suggestions which will increase efficiency of operation, save money or otherwise improve management. Such ideas are submitted through agency "suggestion programs." Cash awards vary in amount from $10 to $1000. They are not included in the worker's regular salary.

Both types of awards cannot be given for the same accomplishment or improvement.

Q. I was recently promoted from GS-3, $2970 a year, to GS-4, $3115 a year, which is a yearly increase of $145. Will I receive my regular periodic step increase which will be due in about six weeks?

A. No. The increase of $145 which you received is greater than the $80 step rate for your grade. You begin a new waiting period on the date you receive the increase.

Q. My periodic pay increase was due at the beginning of the pay period on November 12, 1950. Three months or so before that date I was suspended from duty for four days. My personnel officer has told me that this period of suspension delayed my pay increase for one full pay period. Is this correct?

A. Yes. Current pay regulations provide that periods of suspension are not "creditable service" for step-increase purposes. This means that you must work four extra days before being eligible for the step increase and, as a result, your salary increase will be delayed one pay period.

Q. If I leave a permanent position in grade GS-9 in my present agency to accept an indefinite appointment in grade GS-9 in another agency, will my periodic step increase still be effective 52 weeks after the date I received my permanent appointment in this grade?

A. Yes. However, if you have any break in service, such as a break in service of 30 days, you will not receive the step increase until you have made up the 30 days during which you were not on the active employment rolls.

A. I have read that under a recent amendment to the Social Security Act temporary Federal employes must contribute to the social security fund. If I accept an indefinite appointment in the Department of Commerce will I be required to pay 1½ percent of my salary to this fund, or 6 percent of my salary to the civil service retirement fund, or both?

A. You cannot make contributions under both the Civil Service Retirement Act and the Social Security Act at the same time. If you have competitive civil service status, and have had a break in service, your placement under the Civil Service Retirement Act is optional with the agency. If you do not have competitive status you will be placed under the Social Security Act. If you have not had a break in service you will remain under the civil service retirement system.

Civic Group Bucks Shelter For Animals

Members of the West Kensington, Md., Civic Association will protest the proposed animal shelter in Kensington at the Montgomery County Council's regular meeting in Rockville Tuesday.

The members, and those residents in Kensington who wish to join the fight, will form a motorcade at Warner st. and Ewell ave. in Kensington at 2 p. m. to travel to Rockville.

Attorney Eugene Lilpfert, chairman of the association's laws and taxation committee, will serve as spokesman for the group.

The association's request for a new public hearing on the matter was turned down by the council last Tuesday. Irving G. McNayr, county manager, assured association officers, however, that purchase of the site for the proposed shelter will not be completed before council members hear them.

The group has been joined in its protest by the Kensington Town Council and the Kensington Chamber of Commerce.

Chest Opens 'Emergency' Drive for Goal

Many Residents Were Never Asked For Contributions

intensive fund-raising campaign ever held in Washington—is the Korean crisis.

The 1951 Chest goal was originally set at $4,100,000. But to provide a special fund "for the armed forces and other services related to the emergency" the goal was increased last September to $4,260,000.

So far, 79.18 percent of the goal has been collected—$3,372,965.

With 100 percent attained, the Chest in 1951 could aid an estimated 284,000 people in the Washington area, including 34,000 servicemen and their families.

With only 79.18 percent, 58,136 persons would have to go without Chest Federation assistance in 1951.

Clergy of all faiths yesterday made appeals from their pulpits.

And the Weather Bureau's automatic answering service—WEather 1212—added the Chest appeal at the end of its recorded weather forecast.

Three hundred telephone operators, all members of Traffic Division 50 of the CIO Communication Workers, are volunteering their time to answer the Chest phones.

Fifteen special Metropolitan 6262 lines have been installed in the old building of The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.

From 6 a. m. until midnight, the girls work in six-hour "tricks." Then a telephone service—Telephone Answering Service, Inc.—takes over to put the Metropolitan 6262 campaign on a 24-hour basis.

The first person to call in yesterday was John B. Hyde of the Southern Railway System here.

Once the subscriber's call is received, a cross-reference system shows the Chest organization the location of the nearest Chest solicitor.

Here's how it actually worked out yesterday:

One of the early calls was from Mrs. Frank Mersch, 76, of 826 Kennedy st. nw. She'd like to give something, she said, but so far no Chest solicitor had been around to see here.

So, about 9:30 a. m., Miss Helen Keyes, daughter of Chest Executive Director Edward J. Keyes, called on Mrs. Mersch.

Handing over a check for $3, Mrs. Mersch told Miss Keyes: "I felt that I wanted to do my part."

Miss Keyes' next call was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Farid Srour of 714 Maple ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Srour, a native of London, explained that she had met her husband while she was teaching English. A pre-medical graduate, he is now working for an insurance company while awaiting admission to a medical college.

"You know," said Mrs. Srour," we have a special reason for giving this donation. When Jimmy"—she pointed to her 17-month-old son—"was about to be born, my husband was a student. Of course, I wasn't working.

"We went to the Chest's Hospital Service Agency and they referred me to the Silver Spring Hospital Service Agency for help.

"We got help then, when we needed it most. We said that as soon as we got a chance and had the money, we'd make it good."

She gave Miss Keyes a check for $20.

Chest Expresses City's Conscience, Rabbi Says

"The Community Chest expresses the collective conscience of our community in the sacred task of aiding our neighbors in need.

"Our free-will offering to this cause is the truest witness of our devotion to our fellowman.

"Everyone should respond generously upon one's own initiative."

—Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Chest Helps Pretty Drug Addict, Youth Who Started Wrong, Father of Sick Family

The Community Chest yesterday opened its eight-day drive for $887,000 to put the 1951 goal of $4,260,000 over the top. The Chest this year has helped just such people as these case histories describe. If the campaign fails, others like them may suffer in 1951.

The names are changed—the stories are true:

Lou was a good guy. His wife and four children loved him.

But all of a sudden he began losing jobs, one after another. Then for 18 months all he had was odd jobs. Pickings got slimmer at the dinner table, and the kids' clothing more darned. At school their grades went down.

In desperation, Lou's wife consulted her parish priest. He sent her to Catholic Charities, 1441 Rhode Island ave. nw. A worker there found that Lou's hard luck with jobs began with heavy drinking.

Giving the family a basket of groceries wasn't going to cure anything, so the worker went to work on Lou. With the help of the priest, she made Lou understand that he drank to escape facing difficult situations.

Catholic Charities, a Chest-aided group, helped with food and clothing, even met some medical bills, and Lou began trying hard. He slipped a few times, but he's had a steady job for a year now. He's regained the respect of his children, his self confidence is growing, and his back bills are almost paid.

Buck was considered a thief by the Rockville, Md., police. They'd picked him up several times.

Buck's mother knew him as a problem child, sullen and antagonistic. The Juvenile Court referred the 14-year-old boy and his mother to the Montgomery County Mental Hygiene Clinic, a Red Feather agency. At the end of three interviews Buck still had not been able to tell the clinic why he was unhappy.

Then he was in trouble again. Sent to a training school, he ran away. Then he came back to the clinic again, and the clinic and the probation officer arranged for Buck to go to a summer camp. Buck liked the camp, he felt accepted there.

While Buck was at camp his mother talked to the psychiatrist at the clinic each week. She learned that Buck was trying to express—without knowing it—his need for help in making a satisfactory adjustment with his family, where he felt unwanted, and with others.

When Buck came home from camp he and his mother continued to visit the clinic. With the help of his mother and father he began to feel like a member of the family. People outside the family began to like him, too, and his school work improved. Buck is a new "man."

When Ginger, a pretty girl from a respectable family, looks back it seems like a drug fiend's nightmare. It was.

Ginger's trouble began when she became infatuated with a drug peddler. By regularly giving her injections when she was intoxicated, he made her an addict, and once "under control" he used her as an agent in selling narcotics.

Several terms in the women's reformatory resulted, during one of which her mother died, brokenhearted and ashamed.

While serving her various reformatory sentences, Ginger showed an interest in ceramics, but her feeling of hopelessness prevented her making much progress.

It was at this point that the Bureau of Rehabilitation, a Red Feather agency at 424 5th st. nw., stepped in. The bureau's members befriend individuals in correctional institutions, and a woman member came to Ginger's aid.

Visiting Ginger regularly at the reformatory, she encouraged Ginger to work actively at ceramics. In time she made Ginger see that the drug peddler was using her as a tool.

When Ginger left the reformatory after her last sentence she had grown in moral strength, and freed herself of the attachment to the peddler and the drug habit.

She has set up a ceramics shop in the garage of her sponsor from the Bureau of Rehabilitation, and sings in the choir of her sponsor's church.

Ginger has also won her place back in her own family's circle.

When a nurse at a branch office of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society began asking Dick questions, she found he really had troubles.

Dick's wife was in the hospital, about to have a premature child after a serious complication of pregnancy. At home were a boy, 9, and a girl, 3, and no one to care for them unless he stayed home from work.

The logical thing, it seemed to the nurse, was to try to secure a housekeeping aide to come to Dick's home until his wife was able to take care of things herself. Then it turned out that the 3-year-old had measles, with a high fever.

As housekeeping aides do not serve in homes where there is communicable disease, Dick had to stay home and care for the children, while the visiting nurse made daily visits.

Just as the girl was recovering, her mother came home from the hospital. Because the danger of contagion from the measles was past, the housekeeping aide now came to the house.

There was still work for the visiting nurse to do, however. For weeks she visited the weakened mother, giving her instruction in caring for the new baby boy and watching him to see that he developed satisfactorily.

Thanks to the work of a Red Feather agency, mother and baby have progressed in health. Today the baby and the 3-year-old are receiving further medical supervision at a nearby well-baby clinic.

Boy, 12, Modest About Talk To Adults on Equal Rights

Martin Dillon of 900 Longfellow st. nw., who just became 12 years old, learned in school that the Declaration of Independence says, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal."

As Washington's youngest delegate to the White House Conference on Children and Youth last week he put his learning to use.

The husky Paul Junior High student, with juvenile modesty, didn't want to recall much about telling a study group of 60 much older persons about the statement in the Declaration of Independence, and making clear his views on race discrimination and prejudice.

Martin, picked by President Curtis Shears, of the Big Brothers of D. C. to be their representative at the conference, chose to be a member of the group studying "the effects of discrimination and prejudice on a healthy personality."

Martin, whose father died seven years ago, has been a member of Big Brothers about a year. The organization provides prominent men to be advisers and friends to boys who lack a father's time and advice.

"At the conference they kinda laughed when I got up," Martin said, "but I expected that."

He looked a little uncomfortable, as if such things don't have to be explained, when his mother said Martin always has been an advocate of fair play and a foe of race prejudice.

He may have inherited it from his father, who came to America from Ireland when he was a young man, she said.

A 73-year-old woman patient, described as nervous and depressed, died in a 45-foot leap from the third floor of the Washington Sanitarium yesterday, police reported.

The woman was identified as Mrs. Nannie Marie Shacklette of Stafford, Va.

Police said Mrs. Shacklette slashed her left wrist at about 10:15 a. m., walked out on the third-floor portico, stepped on a chair and leaped a 3-foot rail.

She was pronounced dead at 11:30 a. m. by a hospital staff physician. Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of death by suicide.

Officials said the only surviving relative is Miss Nannie Berry, of 2520 14th st. nw.

Two Men Die In Maryland Auto Crashes

Baltimorean Killed As Vehicle Hits Pole On Bypass at Laurel

Two men were killed and another was critically injured in Maryland traffic accidents yesterday.

Fatally injured in one crash was Leo A. Shiflett, 22, of Baltimore, Md. He was dead on arrival at Leland Memorial Hospital in Riverdale.

Police said the driver of the car, in which he was riding, Edward N. Luce, 20, of Catonsville, Md., failed to make the turn into the northbound traffic lane of the boulevard's cut-off around Laurel. The car traveled up over a triangular island for 230 feet into a telephone pole, they reported. The accident occured at 3:45 a. m.

Luce was treated at Warren's Hospital in Laurel for a cut over the left ear. Three other passengers in the car also were treated there for minor injuries. They were Mrs. Betty Shiflett, 21, the dead man's wife; Mrs. Mary E. Luce, 20, wife of the driver, and Miss June Miller, 20, of Baltimore.

Laurel police charged Luce with reckless driving and manslaughter. He was released under $600 bond for his appearance December 21 in Hyattsville Police Court.

Benjamin R. Bowen, 34, of Barstow, Md., was killed instantly when his car collided head-on with another car on Route 2 about 2½ miles south of Prince Frederick in Calvert County, Md., about 1:30 a. m.

The driver of the other car, Lawrence H. Smith, 21, of St. Leonard, Md., was admitted to the Calvert County Hospital in Prince Frederick with lacerations and a fractured left knee and wrist. His condition was reported to be not serious.

A passenger in Smith's car, James E. Beverly, 31, of St. Leonard, was reported to be in critical condition with a possible fractured skull, fractured jaw and face lacerations. He was treated at the Calvert County Hospital and later transferred to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

In Washington, Miss Lee Benton, 22, of 5615 8th st. nw., was critically injured when thrown from a motorcycle at 36th st. and Benning rd. ne. about 1:30 a. m. She was admitted to Gallinger Hospital with a possible skull fracture.

Police said the motorcycle, driven by Phillip Wilson, 23, of 1608 22d st. se., skidded when he attempted to turn from Benning rd. into 36th st. Wilson suffered minor lacerations.

In Building Home

Policeman Burned by Boiling Tar

A Metropolitan policeman was burned yesterday when he was splattered with boiling tar while working on a house he is building in Arlington.

Admitted to Arlington Hosiptal with first and second degree burns to his face and right leg and arm was Pvt. Edward Lee Cave, 30, a motorcycle man attached to the Traffic Division. His condition is not serious.

Police said Cave, who lives at 1927 N. Calvert st., Arlington, is building a home at 2401 N. Nottingham st. He was heating a bucket of tar inside the new house, when it boiled over.

Cave was splattered when he attempted to carry the bucket of tar outside so it would not run over on the floor, police said. He was taken to the hospital by a neighbor.

Southwest May Be Site Of 1st Slum Eradication

Hint of Such Work Given in NCPPC's Report on Plan To Develop D. C.

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Slum clearance in Southwest Washington may be the first land redevelopment project to be recommended by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The hint is contained in a report of the NCPPC's 30-year-plan for Washington's development. Released yesterday, the report is entitled "Housing and Redevelopment."

It has already been announced that the next slum clearance project would be selected from blighted areas in northwest, northeast and southwest.

"From preliminary analysis of these three sections," the NCPPC housing report says, "it is likely that further studies will prove the southwest as offering the most favorable possibilities for a pilot project.

A Defined Neighborhood

"The southwest represents a defined neighborhood with recognizable boundaries," the planners continued. "On the north, the railroad cuts off the district from the adjoining Federal buildings south of the Mall. On the east, South Capitol st., Randall Recreation Center, and the Naval Gun Factory mark out boundaries . . . The Anacostia River and the Washington Channel form natural barriers on the south and the west."

"For many years, areas in the vicinity of the Capitol grounds have been held up as examples of the need for low-rent housing and redevelopment programs. It is proposed, therefore, that a project area, or areas, should be selected reasonably close to the Capitol," said NCPPC.

For the most part, the 40-page monograph lists housing characteristics of the District (mostly based on 1940 census figures) and presents general planning criteria which NCPPC believes should be followed in any future redevelopment.

Coordination Urged

The 'most vital point" in the successful future operations, the report emphasized, is establishment and maintenance of close coordination between the redevelopment and public-housing programs.

Said the report: "Any redevelopment of Washington's downtown slums involves eviction of low-income families now living there. By terms of law and common humanity, it is required that displaced families shall be offered substitute housing of a decent, safe and sanitary character, at prices they can afford.

"There is a segment of this population that cannot afford to pay for decent, safe and sanitary housing. Where this segment exists, the only solution is low-rent public housing.

"If redevelopment is to succeed, new public housing units must be built and located so as to take care of low-income evictees from redevelopment areas."

Deadlock May End

Until a week ago, Gordon R. Young, engineer Commissioner, and John Ihlder, executive director of the National Capital Housing Authority, had been deadlocked over this same general problem of assuring coordination between slum clearance and public housing.

Young had refused to sign a cooperate agreement—needed by Ihlder before he could purchase sites for his planned 4000 public housing units—until Ihlder would agree to reserve a portion of his units for families evicted from dwellings razed under slum clearance.

District and Federal lawyers are now working out a compromise agreement on this issue which is understood to be agreeable to both Young and Ihlder.

One World Forecast From Present Travail

Out of the present world conflict and turmoil can emerge "one of the great, significant ideas of our time," the Rev. Ralph W. Sockman predicted yesterday.

The pastor of Christ Church, New York City, told an overflow audience at Washington Cathedral that from "this present sorrow, we can again bring something better to birth—world community."

A leading exponent of world peace through interfaith, understanding and cooperation, the Methodist clergyman prophesied that historians 2000 years hence "would call this period not the atomic age, but the organizing era."

"We can win the respect and cooperation of the world, Dr. Sockman asserted, "if America will translate her bigness into greatness and remain loyal to the principles set forth last June through the United Nations."

Dr. Sockman also pointed to grounds of comfort in "the present perilous times."

"The mature person takes faith from the fact we have come through difficult times in the past," he said, citing George Washington's reverses before victory, the suffering of both sides during the Civil War, and Pearl Harbor, nine years ago.

"Out of darkness, faith, hope and love come forth," he continued.

"A second key to solace," he said, "is revealed through the divine love that endures. We come closer to God through suffering than through success."

Universal Bible Sunday Observed by Churches

Universal Bible Sunday was observed in several Washington area churches yesterday.

Among sermons preached on the subject was one by the Rev. Harold Bend Sedgwick, rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.

"The Bible teaches steadfastness," the rector declared. "The pages unfold the story of heroic lives, scores and scores of them, who have carried burdens on top of burdens, yet have peace on their faces.

"That shows the Bible is what life can be. If the weight is too heavy for you alone to carry, turn the pages and you will hear a voice saying, 'Not too heavy for you and me together.'

"And you come up smiling. That is the message of the Bible."

Berge Hits McCarthyism And Defends Acheson

A spirited attack on "McCarthyism," and a strong expression of confidence in Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson were made yesterday by former Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge.

In a talk before the current problems class at All Souls Church (Unitarian), the attorney called Acheson "the best qualified Secretary of State in the past 40 years," and "the target of isolationist forces personified by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.)."

"Those of us who believe in the United Nations as the principal hope of mankind today and feel that it must have our undivided support, that there is need for the free nations of the world to stand together to resist common aggression, have, I think, a duty to stand by the Secretary of State and to oppose the camp of defamation that Senator McCarthy and his cohorts are carrying on," Berge declared.

Common Man Will Save World, Minister Thinks

With the unknown, unheralded people struggling "to give reality to the great dreams of mankind," lies the world's future, the Rev. Russell C. Stroup declared in a sermon yesterday.

In a blast at "headline grabbers," the minister of Georgetown Presbyterian Church scored "the few crackpots in Congress who hog the headlines," and lauded "the many conscientious legislators who faithfully discharge their duties."

In the State Department, the minister said, "it is not a handful of perverts and fellow travelers, but a vast army of men and women in our foreign service who are seeking to lead the Nation and the world through the uncharted dangerous paths of peace."

Archbishop O'Boyle Dedicates Ridge, Md. School

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, paid tribute to the parishioners of St. Michael's Church, Ridge, Md., yesterday in dedicating the new parish school.

The school, replacing a structure built in 1911, will accommodate 600 students, the archbishop said, in praising the "earnestness and application" of those who contributed to its being.

He was assisted by the Rev. Merke V. Baldwin, pastor of St. Michael's Church, which includes in its parish the first Catholic mission in English-speaking North America.

D. C. Churches Set Prayers For Peace

Many Greater Washington churches, mindful of increasing world tension, have set extraordinary prayer periods for peace this week.

All Roman Catholic Churches in the Archdiocese of Washington yesterday held novena services for world peace. Similar services will be held for the next nine days.

Today 20 Protestant churches will begin a five-day period of special noontime prayer for the world's future.

Catholics in almost 100 churches and missions yesterday heard Pope Pius XII's request, quoted in a telegram from the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, for "a crusade of prayers."

Taxes Human Nature

The Pontiff, in citing the horrors of war, declared "a peace crusade all the more necessary because the task of settling human disagreement is often beyond the powers of human nature."

His message specifically asked that peace prayers be "repeatedly offered" during the church's customary novena before Christmas.

Meanwhile, the Washington Federation of Churches, through its Executive Secretary Frederick E. Reissig, announced plans for "brief periods (of prayer) during all this week."

"Because of the critical international crisis, the churches will offer prayers seeking God's direction and help as our Nation and world face a future fraught with staggering dangers," Dr. Reissig said.

He listed the following churches as open, Monday through Friday, 12:05-12:15 p. m.

Japan About to Lose Its Kimono, U.N. Club Fashions Will Prove

THE HEIGHT OF FASHION in Japan today is divided between Western garb and the modified kimono as shown above in two versions. On the right is a striped day dress, designed by Mrs. Chiyo Tanaka, whose creations will be modeled at a fashion show at the United Nations Club on Thursday, from 5 to 7. The strapless number to the left is extremely smart for evening

THE KIMONO must go, say Japanese fashion experts. Western clothes and modified robes today are replacing the colorful dress of Japanese jeunes filles of prewar years.

Washington has had little of late on Japanese fashions, but Thursday things will be brought up to date at a fashion show held at the United Nations Club.

From 5 to 7 p. m., American and Japanese girls will model clothes designed by Mrs. Chiyo Tanaka of Tokyo who will be on hand to do the commentating. Mrs. Tanaka is the daughter of Baron K. Matsui, former Ambassador to London and Paris and one-time attache at the Japanese Embassy in Washington. After her marriage to a professor at Kobe University, she traveled with him, studying in Paris and Switzerland, and in New York she attended the Traphagen School of Design.

Her ideas for designs grew out of afternoon tea sessions with friends in her native Tokyo. She now has a dressmaking and designing school of her own and teaches at the Tokyo Kyoritsu and at Nara, a woman's state college near Kobe.

IN DISCUSSING the traditional kimono of prewar Japan, Mrs. Tanaka says the doctors found it unhealthy because of bindings and excess materials which add to heaviness and fatigue. At least seven belts are tied to keep kimono in place, and the legs are bound so tightly that only small steps are possible. Sleeves cover the hand and reach almost to the floor.

All this has been adjusted, and now the kimono has short sleeves, for day, and for evening, no sleeves at all, not even straps. The sash or obi, has been shortened and bindings have been banished.

Mrs. Tanaka admits her customers go mostly for Western clothes, which she also designs, but the Kimono in modified version, she says, is still smart for evening wear. Before the war, the traditional kimono was tolerated, as homes of well-to-do families were always staffed with many servants. Since the war, these same families are fortunate to have one servant, and a trailing kimono has become an impractical nuisance.

WHILE SHE is here, Mrs. Tanaka is picking up new ideas to take back to Japan, and she is studying our system of teaching designing. A pretty, soft-spoken young woman, Mrs. Tanaka is making many friends during her visit here. Her designs were shown at the Brooklyn museum in October, and she received many favorable notices in the New York papers.

A few hand-picked models petite enough for Mrs. Tanaka's fashions, who will model Thursday afternoon, are Miss Ramona North, Miss Anne Baube, Miss Elizabeth Bassett, Miss Barbara Eddy, Mrs. Ross de Matteo, Miss Flavia Lee, Mrs. Chieko Takehisa, and Miss Fuku Yokoyama. Mrs. James F. O'Hanlon is chairman of arrangements.

Novel Tree Trimmings Can Be Made at Home

You can start with an ordinary paper sack and achieve a Christmasy gift-wrap. You can also start with an ordinary silver ball, says Sally Robb, and make a party favor, an unusual tree ornament, or a gift box. These ingenious ways for making your Christmas fancy are described in McCall's for December:

"Instead of struggling to wrap a big awkward gift, put it in a shopping bag decorated with a Santa Claus head cut from red and white paper and add a bouquet of greens.

"Drop small hard-to-wrap gifts into plain grocery sacks. Cuff the top with honeycomb ribbon and add cluster of greens and balls for a Christmasy touch.

"Make a drum major for your tree. Paint his face on a 3¼-inch silver ball. Use a paper cup for his hat and tuck an icicle tassel into a hole in the top. Hang by a string drawn through hat.

"For a money gift, remove the metal cap on a silver ball, insert the bill, replace the cap. Paint 'Break Me' with red nail polish. Add furbelows and cardboard hatchet.

"Make an angel for a favor. Cover cardboard tube with gilt paper. Use a 2¼-inch silver ball. Run string from wire loop in the ball to a cardboard base. Add golden wings and tinsel."

Separates Have New Role, Invade Formal Fields

THE BLOUSE-SWEATER-AND-SKIRT outfit essential to every working wardrobe is appearing in a new role this winter, turning up in the season's richest fabrics, sparked with glittering costume jewelry. Separates are no longer only for office or casual wear. They're dressed up to match the demands of formal winter evenings.

Important news comes in two silhouettes. Full skirts of velvet, brocade, faille and nubby wool are topped by bare blouses with scooped necklines. Equally smart is the slim silhouette in such variations as linen, velveteen, wool crepe. To vary the effect evening sweaters come in sophisticated new textures, highlighted with flickering beads and glittering gold thread. Charm shows one of these knit of pure silk thread, others in nubby boucle with a hand-woven look.

There's no mistaking the new role of separates when they're paired with winter's most exciting accessories—long gloves in black or white and long, chandelier-like rhinestone earrings. Afoot, velvet shell pumps and bare gold sandals go over gossamer stockings with the barest of reinforcements.

New fabrics for the most festive dance dresses are pure silk chiffon, black lace, taffeta with pearl and rhinestone beading. And to top everything after five, Charm says "choose a brocade theater coat or a fake broadtail jacket, both new, both brilliant."

Miss Davis a Gifted Singer With an Outstanding Talent

By Paul Hume

If I may venture to express an opinion —

Virginia Davis, who sang an unusual program of folk and art songs yesterday afternoon in the Phillips Gallery, is a young lady of outstanding gifts and talent.

Her taste in music is directed toward the finest samples of folk music from Europe and this country. She presents these miniatures with sensitive skill. But strictly in the manner of a diseuse. Her props are few — four or five kerchiefs from which she chooses the one whose color matches the mood of her next song — a lace handkerchief, or merely her own expressive countenance.

Her French diction, which filled the first portion of the afternoon, is that of a native. She imbues it with constant inflections of color and can make it take on the characteristics of men, when her song requires it.

Her first song was one of the finest things she did. Noted on the program as seventeenth century English, it is actually French of the same period. It is widely known today as the hymn "Let All Mortal Flesh Keep Silence."

Almost every item of Miss Davis' program was worthy of the finest notice. The one problem throughout was the drawback placed on her delivery by her occasional vocal inability to meet her interpretative demand. In Ravel's Eternal Enigma, which was too slowly sung, and too ponderously, and even more in his Kaddisch, the purely vocal hurdles were not too well met. But it was a happy afternoon because of the artist's style and taste.

In the evening, the combined glee clubs and choirs of Catholic University sang their annual Christmas program under the direction of the Rev. Russell Woollen.

Roberta Long, Washington soprano, was soloist. The choral work, in a variety of music ranging from Bach to contemporary Charles Bryan, was assured and polished.

We have praised Miss Long in recent recitals. Hearing her in the unusual size of Catholic University's Gymnasium, we are more convinced than ever that here is one of the real voices of our country.

In arias by Handel, Bach, and Debussy, she filled the auditorium with rich and controlled sound. If this greatly talented Washington musician gets the break she deserves, this city will have sent out a real singer.

DR. MYRTLE CHENEY MURDOCK, wife of the Representative from Arizona, was honor guest last evening at a dinner party given by members of the Woman's National Democratic Club. The occasion launched Dr. Murdock's new book "The Life and Work of Constantino Brumidi," which goes on sale today.

Brumidi, an Italian artist of the nineteenth century whose murals decorate the Capitol, receives full recognition in Dr. Murdock's book for his contribution to American culture.

Some 200 guests were present at last evening's dinner. Dr. Murdock received, assisted by Mrs. Ernest W. McFarland, wife of Arizona's Senator, and Mrs. Harold A. Patten, wife of the Representative from Arizona. After cocktails, guests were seated at small tables in the dining room.

REPRESENTATIVE FRANCES P. BOLTON spoke on Dr. Murdock's book, and Signora Tarchiani, wife of the Ambassador of Italy, gave a talk entitled "An Italian Artist Honored." Of special interest was a speech given by Miss Mildred Thompson, a great-grandniece of Brumidi, whose scrapbook depicts highlights in the life story of the artist.

Wac Maj. Beryl Simpson, long-time friend of the author, spoke on Dr. Murdock's life in Arizona as wife of a Congressman, and Mrs. Harvey Wiley of the Chevy Chase League of American Penwomen paid tribute to Dr. Murdock as a fellow penwoman.

Dr. Murdock's new book is beautifully illustrated, and it is the opinion of critics that the book is one of the most outstanding of its kind ever published in the United States and one of the foremost productions classified under Americana.

A COCKTAIL PARTY WAS GIVEN yesterday by Senora Luz Bianchi de Ossa, daughter of Senora Nieto del Rio, wife of the Ambassador of Chile.

A FAREWELL DINNER PARTY for Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Lauris Norstad was given last evening by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles Pearre Cabell at their home in Arlington. In the company were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Truman Landon, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank F. Everest, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, Col. and Mrs. Harold C. Donnelly and Col. and Mrs. Donald Dunford.

The dinner menu included Mrs. Norstad's favorite Mexican dishes such as enchilados, chile and Mexican rice. About the fifth of January, General Norstad, commander-in-chief of the United States Air Force in Europe, is leaving with Mrs. Norstad for Europe.

AS THE INVITATIONS READ, guests of Jessie Fremont and Hazel Edgar yesterday had their fill of "entertainment, drinks and food, laughter, chatter, what you will." The party was an up-and-down arrangement, from 5 to 7. Tea was served downstairs in the apartment of Miss Fremont, and upstairs in Hazel Edgar's flat, guests were offered coffee. The hostesses share a house on P st.

Mrs. William Barret Ridgely, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Frank Conger Baldwin and Mrs. George Becker presided in turn at the tea table.

Mrs. Edgar's assistants were Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. T. Richard Cowell, Mrs. Harold Burton and Mrs. William D. Connor. Among the many in the merry gathering were Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Miss Bertha Noyes, Mrs. George Barnett, Peter Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. James Sharkey, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Frank Baldwin, and the Italian Counselor and Signora Luciolli.

The occasion celebrated Miss Fremont's second anniversary at 2455 P st., and also served as the debut of "Gay," Hazel Edgar's black poodle, who enjoyed his first introduction to Old Washington in a sizeable gathering.

Charles G. Cooper Takes Bride in Columbus, Ohio

Of interest to Washington is the marriage of Mrs. Marguerite Hosack Doelker and Charles Gray Cooper, which took place December 9 in Columbus, Ohio. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Hosack of Mount Vernon, Ohio, and the late Mr. Hosack.

David Cooper, a student at Hotchkiss School, was best man for his father. The bridegroom, an alumnus of Hotchkiss and Yale, is vice president and director of Cooper Bessemer Corporation. He is a member of the Chevy Chase, Metropolitan and University Clubs.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper will reside in Washington.

Family Living

Mealtime Plays a Big Part in Group Harmony

This is the first of a series of six articles on the factors promoting successful family living. It is reported with permission from The Annals of The American Academy of Political and Social Science for November, 1950.

By James H. S. Bossard, Eleanor S. Boll and Winogene P. Sanger

MOST OF THE FORCES playing upon the contemporary family have made for the individualizing of the life of its members, and this fact has correspondingly influenced the literature dealing with family life. Important as this individualistic emphasis may be, the essential fact remains that a family is a project in group living, and the stability of the family calls for the promotion of techniques in the co-operative functioning of its members.

It is our contention that this approach has been unduly neglected in the recent literature of family life, as well as in the teaching of students in preparation for marriage. These articles seek to present in summary form six factors whose role in the promotion of successful family living seems wholly obvious and highly important. They are (1) the family meal as a form of family operation, (2) family patterns of conversation, (3) family entertaining and visiting, (4) household pets, (5) family rituals, and (6) the family council.

About the Authors

James H. S. Bossard, Ph. D., L. D. H., is professor of sociology and director of the William T. Carter Foundation at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of many books in the field of sociology, the most recent of which are The Sociology of Child Development (1948); Family, Marriage and Successful Marriage (co-author, Parenthood (co-author, 1948); 1947); and Family Situations (co-author, 1943.)

Eleanor S. Boll and Winogene Pratt Sanger are research associates with the William T. Carter Foundation. Eleanor Boll is co-author with Dr. Bossard of Family Situations.

THE FAMILY MEAL

THERE ARE TWO places where the family spends most of its time as a group. They are the dining room and the living room. The relative importance of these two varies, but it seems safe to say that for most American families, the dining room takes first place. It is here that the family members meet regularly, repeatedly, and in intimate participation with each other.

From this it follows that the family meal is a recurrent and fundamental aspect of the family's life. And what happens is more than a dietary procedure. It is while seated around the table that the family is at its greatest ease, both physically and psychologically; is held together for definite periods of time; becomes engrossed in common objectives; and has fewer distractions than at most other times. There are, to be sure, many purposes which the family meal is made to serve in the life of the family. Firsthand studies made under the auspices of the William T. Carter Foundation at the University of Pennsylvania identify four common types of family meals.

1. Some are hurried meetings which appear to be regarded by the family personnel as unavoidable periods of family refuelling. Food tends to be served as if eating were a mere physiological compulsion, and gulped as if the time required were a wasteful form of biological maladjustment. Conversation is scant, often blunt and direct, and the meal is terminated as soon as possible.

2. Other family meals are devoted largely to recurrent domestic warfare. The children are taken to task for past or present misdeeds, parents quarrel with each other, the food is criticized or its preparation is depreciated. There are families in which few meals are completed without a quarrel, or without some member of the family leaving the table in tears, anger, or disgrace. Or there is constant nagging about table manners.

3. Some family meals, particularly at selected class levels, become occasions for interesting conversations. Information on various topics is exchanged; triumphs, disappointments, and various other experiences are shared; family programs or projects are evaluated; public issues are discussed; and intellectual interests tend to to be stimulated. All, even the children, are encouraged to take part. Each one who participates is recognized for what he or she contributes to the group discussion.

4. Still other family meals become occasions for family rituals. They are characterized by order and impressive decorum. Prayers may be said by way of prelude, candles may gleam, mother may preside as conventionalities are observed, there are servants perhaps to serve the food, and coffee in the living room may follow. The meal here becomes a "private communion" for the members of the family group.

THE SPECIFIC NATURE and role of the family meal in any particular home is a matter both of circumstance and of choice. In one respect, it is the product of the kind of people that compose the family—their occupations, and their attitudes toward life and toward one another; but in many ways, the family meal becomes a factor which determines the foregoing in some measure. Families make family meals what they are, but is is equally true that family meals make families what they are.

To emphasize the family meal as a factor in family stability means that conscious thought should be given to its systematic cultivation. This involves, of course, many things. The physical setting of the family meal is important. It can be served now in the dining room, then perhaps on the lawn, or on a card table before an open fire or window.

Particular occasions, such as birthdays, family days, and holidays, may be observed with special meals, and at special places. Attention to impressive details, like eating by candlelight, the use of colorful china, color combination of food, and dining room furnishings, is possible in many—perhaps most—families in this country today. Finally, there is the creation of "atmosphere," with attention to the observance of etiquette. This, assuredly, is available to everyone.

Bells Tolled for Devil

Our ringing of Christmas bells is a tradition probably inherited from the old English "Devil's Knell." House Beautiful Magazine, reporting on the origin of Christmas customs, says the English tolled bells for one hour before midnight on Christmas eve to announce the death of the devil. Then at midnight, great joyous peals would signal the birth of Christ.

The Toybox

It's High Time to Clean House for Santa

By Alleis C. Wilson

AS CHRISTMAS DAY comes nearer it might be wise to tackle the job of cleaning out the children's toy box. It will be easier to do it now before the new Christmas toys fill the box to overflowing. If you find outgrown toys that are still usable, or that can be repaired, you might collect them and give them to one of the many groups who will repair the toys and distribute them.

If you are interested in encouraging thrifty habits in your own small fry, a practical gift is a bank. Banks come in a great many shapes this year—some are even miniature vending machines, filing cabinets, etc.—but an especially jolly one is in the shape of a snow man. His coin slot is placed like a pocket in his coat and a cork in the bottom makes it possible to remove the money without breaking the bank. (The Hecht Co.—98c.)

This being the time of year for winter clothes, the favorite doll may need a new snowsuit. A very sophisticated one is made of fire-engine-red material and simulated leopard trim. Any doll will be the envy of the neighborhood when she wears this. (Play Center, Inc.—$2.95 for an 18-inch doll size.)

IT SEEMS that the stores are stocked with enough styles of pedal cars and trucks to cause a major traffic jam on the sidewalks of most neighborhoods on Christmas afternoon. And a pedal car appeals to nearly every child. A police car, with siren, radio aerial and red signal light sells for $13.95 at Lansburgh's. An olive drab jeep, lettered in white, looks realistic enough to serve in the Army. (F. A. O. Schwarz—$25.)

HE WON'T MELT — Attractive banks, such as this one, encourage children to be thrifty.

Flower prints for coloring are available in a box with instructions. Careful coloring of these makes pictures suitable for framing. (Wm. Ballantyne & Sons book store—$1.) And now they have done something about the problem of crayon breakage which results when eager little fingers press too hard. A set of plastic jackets for crayons (Neisner's—25c) will make the colors last longer.

FOR THE LITTLE BOY remaining in the man you married, the perfect toy for Christmas is Silly Putty. The name explains what it is, but not why it is. You must play with it to fully appreciate it. It looks like putty or modeling clay and a lump of it is packed in a plastic case.

As the label says, "it bounces, stretches, breaks, shatters or settles slowly and majestically into a tired little puddle." It will also pick up impressions (in black or white or color) from newspapers. But it is strictly an adult toy. If it ever gets into business offices, the work will go undone while the "boys" play. Otherwise, it looks like harmless fun (Play Center, Inc.—$1.)

The bottom of a small boy's Christmas stocking would hold a little truck or two very easily. And the youngster would certainly like a mechanical toy when given only a push to start it. A box of three (F. A. O. Schwarz—$1.50) contains a milk truck, a cheese truck and a candy truck.

Other items that would fit in the stocking nicely along with fruit and candy include: a box of eight figures for a miniature railroad—brakeman, conductor, engineer, etc. (The Hecht Co.—$1); a plastic tic-tac-toe game with removable pegs, (Play Center, Inc.—29c); plastic sewing machine for a doll house, (Woolworth's—25c); a mechanical dancing horse, (Woodward & Lothrop—$5.50); small makeup kit with plastic lipstick, powder and rouge, (Neisner's—29c) a kaleidoscope, (G. C. Murphy—49c); Coca-Cola truck with removable cases of cokes, (Lansburgh's — $1.39); jumping ropes or marbles, (Kresge's—10c for either), or a milk truck with carrier of small bottles, (Kann's—$1.75.

ANY NUMBER of phonograph records are available for children, and among the most interesting are those that can be used to teach youngsters. If you are ready to start your child on French or Spanish, albums of three-inch recordings are available from Educational Services for $3.15 postpaid. They can be played on any standard 78 r.p.m. phonograph.

The same K st. firm has a $6 album of two 12-inch records which gives a lesson in safety. Among the songs are "An Automobile Has Two Eyes," "Sticks and Stones and Bones" and "A Goof Plays on the Roof."

Even arithmetic is taught by records. Six-inch records cover number drills for oral and written answers; addition, subtraction and multiplication. ($10). It is unlikely, however, that Junior will ask Santa for these.

Etiquette Books Receive A Workout When There's A Wedding in the Family

DEAR READERS:

The need for funds for the Community Chest is great this year. So is the generosity of "Ask Anne" readers, as shown in your many helpful letters.

Today, from 9 a. m. to 12 noon, I'll be at the switchboard in the old Washington Post building to help readers make their 1951 Community Chest pledges.

If you haven't already made yours, will you call me this morning at Metropolitan 6262?

Sincerely,
ANNE.

EVEN THOUGH YOU'VE NEVER been etiquette-conscious before, you get that way when there's a wedding in the family.

Ordinarily, most of us drift along, doing what seems in good taste, or what our mothers have taught us, not worrying too much about the fine points of social usage. But a wedding brings with it a crop of details that set us to poring over etiquette books and asking worried questions of our friends.

DEAR ANNE:

I have read two books on etiquette, but there are still questions in my mind about my plans for a wedding and reception. Here are some of them:

Should my mother's name be engraved as Mrs. Laura Johnson Brown or as Mrs. Arthur Ingram Brown? Mother has been a widow for 15 years.

In September, I started teaching in an elementary school. Should I send invitations to each member of the staff, even though I am much younger than they and not too well acquainted?

I met my fiance on March 16, 1948. A year ago, we set our wedding date as March 16, 1951. This date comes during the Lenten season. Neither of us is Catholic. Should we keep the same date or choose a date after Lent?

Would this be a suitable menu for refreshments served buffet style: ice cream, cookies, mint wafers, mixed nuts, and punch? If the reception lasts two hours (7 to 9 p. m.), how long should the receiving line remain in formation? T. B., Washington.

Your mother's name should correctly appear as Mrs. Arthur Ingram Brown, even though she has been long widowed.

Since you don't know all the school staff well, I'd just send invitations to your special friends among them or else a general invitation which can be placed on the bulletin board in the office.

Society columns of newspapers reflect the fact that there are fewer big weddings during Lent. However most Protestant churches have no objection to them except during Holy Week. Since your date does not fall in this week, it seems to me you could go ahead with your plans in view of the special significance of the day.

The menu sounds entirely suitable. I imagine you are planning to have wedding cake, too. The receiving line should remain in place until it seems evident that most of the guests have arrived, probably about an hour.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you furnish a recipe for Boston Cream Pie? The one I have been using, an old one, hasn't been too successful.

R. W., Valparaiso, Ind.

BOSTON CREAM PIE

1/3 cup butter
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/3 teaspoon salt
½ cup milk

Sift sugar. Cream butter, adding sugar gradually. When light and creamy, beat in the eggs, one at a time. Add vanilla. Sift cake flour, then sift again with baking powder and salt. Add alternately with milk, beating until smooth. Bake in two greased 8-inch layer cake pans in moderate oven, (375 degrees) for about 25 minutes. Place between the layers either sweetened whipped cream, jam, jelly, or custard filling. Top with confectioner's sugar or spread with whipped cream.

RIBBON SANDWICH SALAD

Ingredients: 2 packages lime-flavored gelatin, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 medium-sized bananas, ¼ cup crushed drained pineapple, ½ cup chopped ripe olives, ¼ teaspoon salt, salad greens.

Method: Prepare gelatin according to directions on package and stir in lemon juice. Pour half into 9 x 9 x 2 inch pan and chill until firm. Mash bananas and combine with pineapple, olives, and salt. Spread over firm gelatin layer. Top with remaining gelatin. Chill until firm. Cut into squares and serve on salad greens. Makes 8 servings.

Dickens Started Us Off

The association of Christmas festivities with coaching, waistcoated gentlemen and bonneted, bemittened ladies is probably attributable to the influence of Charles Dickens, who wrote "A Christmas Carol" and "Pickwick Papers." House Beautiful Magazine reminds us that England took a long time to get over the Puritan taboos on Christmas, and it was Dickens' gay and enthusiastic descriptions of the holiday's merriment which did much to revive the old customs.

Cooking Cues

Daughter will enjoy baking a simple white cake in a square pan and then cutting the cake in small squares and frosting these to make petit-fours. For holiday serving she can decorate the petit-fours with silver, shot, colored sugar, candied cherries, angelica and small pieces of semi-sweet chocolate.

Open-faced sandwiches are attractive garnished with pimiento, ripe or green olives, finely diced green celery, finely cut parsley, tiny slices of sweet pickle.

Nut bread is delicious sliced thin and spread with date filling for teatime sandwiches.

Roosevelt Advocated Elimination of Nazi From All Manifestations of German Life

Installment Twenty-Nine

This is the twenty-ninth of 31 installments of the personal letters of Franklin D. Roosevelt, from the two-volume work, "F. D. R.: His Personal Letters."

F.D.R. to Queen Wilhelmina.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Aug. 26, 1944

My dear Queen Wilhelmina:

I have received your letter of July 16, 1944 and regret that my absence from Washington has delayed a reply. I share, of course, your gratification with the course of the war both in the Pacific and on the continent of Europe and hope that the day of liberation both for the Netherlands and the Netherlands Indies is not far distant.

Your observations respecting the definite eradication of the Nazi Party in Germany correspond very closely to my own views on this subject. It is my view that when the Allied forces are in complete occupation of Germany all leaders and active members of the Nazi Party should be eliminated from any participation in the administration of Germany and forbidden any political activity whatsoever. I fully agree that we cannot risk having these Nazis resume any of their nefarious activity and I assume that one of the principal objects of the occupation will be to root out the Nazi Party in all of its manifestations.

As you know, the European Advisory Commission in London is engaged upon the drafting of surrender terms for Germany and their subsequent execution. I believe that the Commission has recently addressed a letter to your Government, requesting its views in the matter of German surrender and I assume that your Government will, no doubt, express its opinion on the liquidation of the Nazi Party in replying to this letter from the European Advisory Commission. I believe that the various United Nations Governments concerned will not have much difficulty in arriving at an agreed policy for the final eradication of Nazism.

I am sorry, indeed, that you cannot come over this summer and I wish much that I could have gone to England or Scotland, as I had hoped. After the election is over I may be able to arrange a meeting with the Prime Minister of Britain and Marshal Stalin and, if I can do so, I count on seeing you. Things are happening so fast in a military way at this moment that, while I do not dare predict a date for the German collapse, it is at least one of the possibilities that by the time I am coming to Europe you will be safely back in the Netherlands again. May Heaven speed the day.

I think that both here and in England there are two schools of thought—those who would be altruistic in regard to the Germans, hoping by loving kindness to make them Christians again—and those who would adopt a much "tougher" attitude. Most decidedly I belong to the latter school, for though I am not blood-thirsty, I want the Germans to know that this time at least they have definitely lost the war.

I was, of course, made very happy in knowing that you escaped so miraculously when your house in London was hit. Remember that it is not only your people in the Netherlands who need you—but people all over the world. Do please take care of yourself.

My wife sends her love and joins me in warm personal greetings.

Your very sincere friend,

The future of Germany was to come up for discussion at Quebec in September. At that time Roosevelt and Churchill approved the Morgenthau plan, which provided for the partition and deindustrialization of Germany. This plan was vigorously opposed by Hull and Stimson. Queen Wilhelmina, in her letter, had indicated her view that in order to eradicate Nazism root and branch it would be necessary to go beyond the "war-criminal" group.

F.D.R. to Douglas MacArthur at G.H.Q., Southwest Pacific Area.

QUEBEC,
Sept. 15, 1944

Dear Douglas:

It is good to get your letter of August twenty-fifth up here in Quebec. I wish you could be here because you know so much of what we are talking about in regard to the plans of the British for the Southwest Pacific. There is no question that Mr. Churchill and the British Chiefs of Staff want to send all they can to the Malay Peninsula, etc.—Army and Navy and Air—as soon as the German war ends.

In regard to our own force, the situation is just as we left it at Hawaii though there seem to be efforts to do a little bypassing which you would not like. I still have the situation in hand.

I formally received our old friend, Osmena, and his Staff about a week ago. He wants to go out—with about a dozen others—as soon as we get a permanent foothold. I will wire you a little later to ask what your thought is on this.

I wish I could hope to come out myself for the great event but we all know there is a lot of this "in the lap of the gods stuff"!

Take care of yourself and give my warm regards to your wife and youngster.

Always sincerely,

At Hawaii, MacArthur and Nimitz had agreed that the next step in the Pacific war would be to recapture Leyte. At the Quebec Conference (Octagon), however, there was debate over whether the Philippines should not be bypassed for a direct assault on Formosa. This was favored by the Navy. Sergio Osmena had succeeded Quezon as President of the Philippines and did accompany MacArthur when he strode ashore at Leyte with the words, "We have returned." MacArthur invited F.D.R. to come to Manila to preside as Commander-in-Chief at the ceremony of raising the flag over the retaken city.

F.D.R. to Claire L. Chennault at A.P.O. 627, New York.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Oct. 2, 1944

My dear Chennault:

I have not written you recently because of the number of troubles here, which you doubtless have some inkling of—troubles in China, I mean. I hope I am going to be able to straighten it out.

In the meantime, as you know, I sent the former Secretary of War and Donald Nelson to talk with the Generalissimo. Nelson has come back two days ago with a more optimistic report on the economic matters than I had expected. However, on military matters things are not so good, though apparently the old supply line over the Hump is working out better than you and I thought.

I will let you know if anything happens. In the meantime, keep up the spirit because it is going to work out all right.

Always sincerely yours,

General Stilwell was in a continuous feud not only with Chiang Kai-shek but with Chennault, who commanded the Fourteenth Air Force. One of the causes of trouble involved the amount of fuel allotted to Chennault, which had to come in over the Hump route from India. Intensive discussions were going on in Washington over the Generalissimo's refusal to accede to our demands that Stilwell be made supreme commander in China. At the end of October Hurley recommended that Stilwell be recalled, and he was replaced by General Albert C. Wedemeyer.

F.D.R. to Cordell Hull.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Oct. 13, 1944

Memorandum for the Secretary of State:

I agree with the views of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in regard to the complete destruction of the German fleet.

I have one amendment to make. Destruction in the past has meant taking the ships to sea and sinking them. I think that in some cases surrendered ships have been destroyed by converting them into scrap metal. I do not like the idea of the complete destruction by sinking of thousands of tons of steel.

Recently a new use for such ships has been discovered. We have used sunken ships as breakwaters for the formation of new harbors. This has been done in Italy and has been done on the coast of Normandy. It is a relatively cheap way to build a breakwater. I think that the United Nations should be in a position to pass on applications by the Allied nations for these ships for the definite and specific purpose of sinking them as breakwaters to improve or create safe anchorages. It is rather a nice thought to use them for such peaceful purposes.

In any such cases, the ships should be sunk at a designated place as quickly as possible and under the eyes of a United Nations' Committee. Once sunk it would be practically impossible to raise them and restore them to war purposes.

F.D.R.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff, in a memo prepared before the Quebec Conference, had recommended the complete destruction of the German fleet.

F.D.R. to Samuel I. Rosenman.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Oct. 24, 1944

Memorandum for S.I.R.:

This is a "must" for the Chicago speech.

F.D.R.

Paul Porter, director of publicity for the 1944 campaign, reported that the Republicans had taken billboards throughout the country with the inscription: "If you want to bring the boys home sooner vote for Dewey and Bricker." Porter believed that it was important to make it clear that the plans of the War Department called for as speedy a demobilization of the armed forces as was consistent with military objectives and our own security.

F.D.R. to Henry A. Wallace in New York.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Nov. 1, 1944

Glad you liked the Chicago show. I promise to make good on the sixty million jobs if you will do the same on your predictions regarding the thirty-six states, the popular and electoral college majorities. That was a grand job you did last night in Madison Square. Hope to see you soon.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

In his Chicago speech F.D.R. had set as his postwar goal full employment and sixty million jobs. Wallace predicted F.D.R. would carry 36 states with a three million popular majority and an electoral college majority of 100. Wallace was right on the 36 states. F.D.R.'s electoral college majority, however, was 333, and his popular vote 3,600,000 above that of Dewey.

U. S. Business Plans Vast Expansion

A very large projected expansion of American manufacturing industry facilities to meet new military demands was evidenced yesterday in a joint Securities and Exchange Commission-Commerce Department survey.

The study showed that American business plans to spend 4.8 billion dollars on new plant and equipment in the first quarter of next year. This is the highest rate on record, and 30 percent above comparable spending in the first three months of 1950.

The present full-year record, $19,230,000,000, was established in booming 1948. In 1949, a "recession" year, expansion outlays fell to $18,100,000,000. This year, marked by a slow start, is expected to be about the same as last, the agencies said.

The report showed a sharp pickup in business spending for new plant and equipment since the outbreak of the Korean war June 25.

"Expenditures for the last half of 1950 are expected to amount to $10,100,000,000, 12 percent more than the last half of 1949 and about equal to the record amount spent in the last half of 1948," the report said.

The Government agencies conceded that higher costs have had a part in causing the increase in expenditures. But they added that their survey also indicates "a sizable increase from 1949 in the physical amount of plant and equipment" bought.

If plans uncovered in the survey are carried out, expansion outlays in the first quarter of next year will be 30 percent above the first quarter of 1950. All major industries will be contributing to the increase.

Survey data indicated that $2,190,000,000 of the total planned outlays of $4,800,000,000 are projected by manufacturing concerns, 740 million dollars by electric and gas utilities, 470 million dollars by transportation companies, 170 million dollars by mining concerns and $1,230,000,000 by commercial and other industries.

The report showed manufacturing concerns have been setting the pace in expanding facilities ever since the Korean war began.

The high rate of expansion of productive capacity forecast for early next year is considered particularly significant for the national defense potential. Many Administration economists insist that if defenses are to be built up to the requisite size, the job must be done by expansion of total capacity and cannot be accomplished merely by cutting down or diverting from civilian consumption.

Accusation Against U. S. Aide Falters

By The Associated Press

Senators reported yesterday that the divorced wife of a former Communist who accused Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg of having attended Communist meetings failed to back him up in this.

This came out as the Senate Armed Services Committee called for additional closed-door testimony concerning charges made by Ralph de Sola of New York against Mrs. Rosenberg, now acting Assistant Secretary of Defense.

Mrs. Rosenberg's nomination for the high military position is before the Senate for confirmation.

De Sola, who testified he was a Communist member in 1934-1935, and Mrs. Rosenberg confronted each other Friday before the committee, where she denied his repeated accusations. Sh said she had never seen De Sola.

Senators declining to be named related that, among other things, De Sola said he had been introduced to Mrs. Rosenberg about 15 years ago and was told then that she was a Communist. He said he had seen her at several meetings of a Communist organization.

He told Senators that his divorced wife, Helen Winner, also of New York, could confirm his testimony.

Senators who heard Miss Winner testify said she denied ever seeing Mrs. Rosenberg at Communist meetings.

The former Mrs. De Sola said she was a Communist Party member then and a former feature editor on the Daily Worker, but that she never saw Mrs. Rosenberg at Communist meetings.

Miss Winner said she and De Sola both were employed on the WPA Writers Project in New York City in the mid-thirties and he was head of a Communist union there. He then was a fanatical Communist, she told Senators, adding that "he is a fanatical anti-Communist now."

Miss Winner said her only meeting with Mrs. Rosenberg was about 1936 when Mrs. Rosenberg settled a dispute on the WPA writers project involving the Communist union and a rival organization.

Senator Russell, acting chairman, has promised that the closed-door testimony will be made public before the Senate acts on the nomination of Mrs. Rosenberg.

The Senate committee unanimously recommended her confirmation Wednesday November 29.

Two witnesses are under subpena to testify today:

J. B. Matthews, former investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Benjamin Freeman, retired New York City business man who said he first put Senators in touch with De Sola.

$6 Billion Ticketed for Plane Output

The Air Force plans to spend about six billion dollars for new planes during the current fiscal year, Assistant Secretary Eugene M. Zuckert said yesterday.

The figure represents 43 percent of the total Air Force budget for fiscal 1951, assuming Congress approves the 18-billion dollar supplemental military appropriations now pending.

While it is more than the Air Force spent for all purposes last year, Zuckert said it would still bring combat plane production up to "only a small percentage of the World War II figure."

He did not indicate how many planes, and what types, the money will buy. But he said the Air Force plans to have 68 combat groups by the end of the fiscal year next June 30.

Its goal for fiscal 1952, ending June 30, 1952, is 84 groups. Zuckert discussed the expansion program on the NBC "Battle Report" television program.

U. S. Cotton Prices Lowest in World; Egypt's Highest

World prices for cotton vary from 41.78 cents a pound in the United States to 69.72 cents in Alexandria, Egypt, the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations reported last night.

Virtually all markets except in the United States carry high export or intermediate taxes on top of the cost prices, OFAR reported. There is no tax in this country.

Highest taxes are in Lima, Peru, where a tax of 28.89 cents a pound is added to the cost of 41.28 cents. In Bombay the price is held by the government to 20.50 cents a pound, but to this is added taxes amounting to 21.30 cents.

OFAR further reported that cotton consumption in the United Kingdom is registering a new postwar high of 45,000 bales per week. It reported great concern in Great Britain over the diminishing supplies of cotton from the United States.

Plenty So Far

Gas Rationing Needless Now, Says Oil Chief

By the United Press

The Government's top petroleum man said yesterday there is no reason to ration civilian gasoline short of a "catastrophe" or a submarine blockade.

There is also no intention as yet to cut the power of motor fuel, said Bruce K. Brown, head of the Petroleum Arministration for Defense. If the demand for military aviation gas increases enough, the quality of gasoline may be reduced—but the reduction will be very small."

Even all-out mobilization probably would not cause gasoline rationing for some time, he indicated, for military strength to use gasoline cannot be built up overnight.

"When we first rationed gasoline in World War II we did it to save rubber," he said. "Later, of course, we had submarines sinking our tankers, and had to ration to save gas."

Industry leaders have estimated that if the octane rating of gasoline has to be cut, a one-point reduction would be enough to ease the situation.

'City of Peace' Is City Divided At Christmas

JERUSALEM, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Jerusalem, the "city of peace," will unite on Christmas to celebrate Christ's birth, but the union will be only a spiritual one, signified by the ringing of church bells and Christian services.

Jerusalem today is two cities—the old and the new, partitioned into Arab and Jewish sectors under the Israeli-Jordan armistice agreement of April 3, 1949.

The old city over which Christ walked, covers only 500 acres The new city, covering 44,000 acres, is less than 100 years old. It has six-story apartment buildings, department stores, government offices, automatic laundries and modern automobiles.

Only in rare instances do residents of one sector enter the other sector. The frontier is closed and guarded by troops and barbed wire barricades, so that almost no contact exists between the Arabs of Jordan and the Jews of Israel.

Churches, monasteries, and missionary institutions of all Christian sects abound in both cities, but almost all the Christian holy places are within the old city's walls.

The old city is sacred to Jews and Moslems as well as Christians. To Jews it is the site of their ancient temple; to Moslems, it is the city from which Mohammed ascended to heaven.

The Gallup Poll

U. S. Public Approves Drafting All Youths for 2-Yr. Training

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 9.—The Conant plan for drafting all young men for two years' military or naval service is widely approved in principle by American voters questioned in a national public opinion survey.

The plan, authored by Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University and former chairman of the National Defense Research Committee, differs substantially from other draft plans in that it would require ALL young men, regardless of their physical condition, to serve the Nation.

Under the plan there would be no deferment. Those who would ordinarily be classed as 4-F in the present selective service draft would be required to do whatever kind of work was suitable to their capacities.

The objective of the Conant plan is to assure a continuing armed force of 3 to 3½ million men.

While future discussion among educators, military leaders and others may affect public attitudes toward the plan, here is what the survey showed:

In the future, do you think every young man (who has not already been in the armed forces) should be required to take some type of military or naval training for two years?"

Yes	64%
Qualified yes	8
No	20
No opinion	8
	100%

The 8 percent who gave qualified answers said mainly that while they approved the idea, they felt that 2 years would be too long.

The survey finds virtually uniform sentiment in all levels, as the following vote by amount of education shows:

	College	High School	Grade School
Yes	60%	65%	64%
Qualified yes	13	9	6
No	23	20	20
No opinion	4	6	10
	100%	100%	100%

The principle of universal military service is one which the American public has long supported. Beginning as early as December, 1942, the Institute has conducted nine national surveys on the question of a one-year period of training for all able-bodied young men.

Here are the highlights of the trend:

"In the future, do you think every able-bodied young man (who has not already been in the armed forces) should be required to take military or naval training for one year?"

	Yes	No	No Opin.
Dec., 1942	66%	27%	7%
Nov., 1945	75	21	4
Jan., 1948	65	24	11
Aug., 1950	78	17	5

A-Bomb Use May Be Moral, Bishop Says

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The new president of the largest Protestant church organization in the world said today that "moral circumstances" may justify the use of the atomic bomb.

The Right Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, head of the newly formed National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States of America, representing 31 million Christians, said he did not share the view that it necessarily is "immoral" to use the atom bomb.

"I don't see how one is to differentiate between weapons," he said in an interview. "I don't see how you can say knives are all right and the A-bomb all wrong."

"I am not a pacifist," Bishop Sherrill declared, adding that war could be reconciled with Christian principles.

He said pacifists who say Christ's teachings are opposed to war under any circumstances see only "one side" of Christ.

"It is not the church's business to promote war. I'm not sure it's right for the church to bless war, though we must face reality. Christ said, 'Turn the other cheek.' But he also said, 'I am come that they may have life and have life more abundantly,' sometimes it seems difficult to live by both of these teachings.

"The Christian's big job is to choose the lesser of two evils, to choose the way which seems to make possible the objectives laid down by the teachings of Christ in a sinful world," even though that sometimes means taking up arms, the churchman said.

Bishop Sherrill warned, however, against any "holy or preventive war."

Men of West Held Weaker Than Asiatics

FRANKFURT, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The Western male, "pampered and soft," may find himself at a physical disadvantage in any war with the "hard, primitive" Russian soldier, Hitler's wartime commander on the Russian front said today.

Lieut. Gen. Heinz Wilhelm Guderian, in a booklet setting out the physical and psychological merits of the Eastern and Western soldier, said of the potential Western fighting man:

"He is less resistant to outside influences than the Eastern man. He is less tough against the hardships of nature. He has been prepared by a mild sea climate and softened by good housing, heating, ample food and good clothing.

"In the psychological field too, the Western man is less hard, less able to 'take it' than the Eastern man.

"Apart from the physical and mental disposition of Western men, the variety of their languages and costumes, the difference in their manner of living create conditions which would make a defense force of Western European alliance so hard to lead."

By contrast, Guderian finds in the East:

"A completely unspoiled type of eastern European—Russians and, even more, Asiatics—who are men with primitive needs almost unimaginable to the Western nations. They are hard, enduring men, used to the exertions and hostility of the continental climate of Russia and Asia.

"This type of man surmounts all other peoples in mental indifference to the impressions of battle. Almost never do you see them panic, as has happened to the men of almost all Western cultures, at the first battle or on the appearance of a new weapon.

"Frederick the Great," Guderian recalled, "said of the Russians, 'One has to shoot them twice and then push them until they finally fall down.'"

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath announced yesterday that Herbert Borkland, second assistant in the Anti-Trust Division, has resigned to enter private law practice with former Assistant Attorney General Herbert A. Bergson.

Redbook Staffers Beaten at Site of H-Bomb Project

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP).—Two Redbook magazine staff members were reported to have been beaten up today by a group of Ellenton, S. C., citizens, apparently angry about the "invasion of outsiders."

Redbook editor Wade Nichols said he was informed that writer Booton Herndon and photographer Ike Vern were assaulted near the Ellenton Baptist Church.

He said about 10 Ellenton citizens were involved. Apparently, he added, they were resentful about the "invasion of outsiders into the area in connection with plans for a new H-bomb project." Herndon and Vern had been assigned to collect material for a story on the project.

Nichols said friction had been caused by the clearing of families from about a 20-square-mile area for the new Government project. In Ellenton, the Rev. R. D. Parkerson of the Baptist Church said only one member of his congregation was involved in the fracas, and that he believed other churchgoers tried to stop it.

16½-Cent Increase Given by Inland Steel

CHICAGO, Dec. 10 (AP).—Inland Steel Co. and the CIO Steelworkers Union announced tonight a wage agreement patterned after those between the union and other major producers.

It calls for an average 16½ cents hourly increase to boost Inland's average wage to $1.83. The boosts are retroactive to December 1.

Two Harmonica Players Win $5000 in Youth Program

The Washington Post

TALENTED TEAM—Harmonica players Rudy Varju (left) and Lee Jenner of Chicago, share the microphone with Horace Heidt (center) after they won first prize in his talent contest

The thundering applause of 10,000 persons in Uline Arena last night gave the $5000 first prize in Horace Heidt's "Original Youth Opportunity Program" to two Chicago harmonica players.

An electric applause meter registered the victory of Rudy Varju and Lee Jenner, both 23 years old, by a five-point margin. Both are truck drivers and former GIs. They also won a gold championship belt.

Four other finalists on the program, which was broadcast over WTOP-CBS and had Mrs. Alben W. Barkley as honor guest, won $1000 each.

The four were: Jesse Owens, 18-year-old former shoeshine boy and baritone from Akron, Ohio; Brad Gordon, 27, former GI and singer from Los Angeles, Calif.; Arthur Olsen, 17-year-old pianist from Minneapolis, Minn., and Sari Barabas, a Hungarian soprano, who was a displaced person brought to the United States by Heidt.

The Uline Arena event was held under the auspices of the Bolling Field Air Force Base for the benefit of the servicemen's welfare activities fund. The sponsor was Phillip Morris and Co.

Mrs. Barkley said the hope of America lies in its youth, and the Heidt program, by providing freedom of opportunity, "enabled the voice of the talented youth of America to be heard."

Other guests on the program were: Col. Eddie Reagan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, and Col. Henry J. Amen, commanding officer at Bolling.

Three Sought In Connection With 3 Fires

Two men and a women were sought by police yesterday as arson suspects after trash fires were discovered in three empty apartments in the 200 block of Bates st. nw. and around the corner on 3d st.

The apartments are part of a development of duplex apartments, formerly occupied by white tenants but now being sold to Negroes.

The first home fire was discovered at 12:34 a. m. Trash was burning in the front and center rooms of the second floor at 209-A Bates st. nw. There were also small fires on the rear porch and in the hall and stairway. The front door was wide open when firemen arrived.

The second home fire was discovered at 1:37 a. m. in the rear room of the second floor at 1539-A 3rd st. nw., just around the corner from the other apartment. Firemen also found some partially burned newspapers in the center room, they said.

At 4:35 a. m., a burning mattress was discovered in the center room on the first floor of 230 Bates st. nw., where the door was unlocked. Deputy Fire Marshal Earl T. Atzrott, who is investigating the fires, said there was no serious damage to any of the apartments.

Jeweler Slain In Lynchburg; Son Arrested

A 61-year-old jeweler was killed at his home in Lynchburg, Va., Saturday night when a long-bladed World War I type bayonet pierced an artery in his left shoulder.

Edgar Rucker Hackworth, 29, was arrested early yesterday and charged with murder in the death of his father, Robert T. Hackworth.

Police said the younger Hackworth had denied the charge during prolonged questioning yesterday.

Hackworth said he believed his father had slipped and fallen on the bayonet, Detective Sergt. E. C. Tweedy said.

No motive had been established late yesterday, but Detective Capt. W. D. Torrence said investigators had been told that there had been trouble among members of the family at home and at their Main st. jewelry firm.

Sergeant Tweedy said the younger Hackworth admitted he had been drinking before his father's death.

Easy Does It

Siegel Doesn't Hold With Getting Excited

By Sonia Stein

THERE IS A SPORTS broadcast I will recommend, sound unheard, to anybody whose indifference to sports makes most sportscasts intolerable. Morris Siegel, a sports writer for The Washington Post, takes over for a week for vacationing Arch McDonald on WTOP tonight at 6:30 with a fine, wholesome attitude. He does not know for sure how long the show is, who the sponsor is, who is going to write the script from which he plans to deviate, and he doesn't expect to get to the station more than 10 minutes ahead of air time to find out. A further sample of his exemplary attitude goes this way: "I don't know what them guys are always getting excited about, screaming into the mike about one team beatin' another. Baseball teams play 154 games a season. It happens 154 times a year. They get beat or they beat somebody else. What's so excitin'?"

Morris Siegel

Actually Moe is an experienced sportswriter who will have the stuff in his head before he goes to the station and, since he's an experienced ad libber undisturbed by the condition of the track, he'll romp home with no trouble. He's pleased to be on WTOP's 50,000-watt station — "the station more people in Washington listen to than any other," to quote the slogan — because his only previous large opportunity on radio had a limited audience. One.

As a Navy man during the war, Siegel was assigned to broadcast Bermuda's own Army-Navy football game. For two and a half hours Siegel talked it up good. Trouble was the show didn't go on the air. "But my Hooperating in that broadcasting booth? Terrific! The other guy in there never even tried to listen to another station."

Perhaps it's just as well the British-bred Bermudans never heard Siegel. He's from Atlanta, Ga., and I'm not sure the Britishers could have taken the switch from Rugby to football, and Siegel's accent besides.

There's no guarantee that the mike won't scare Moe as it's scared good men in the past, but if it doesn't there may be some fun lurking in the series; he's usually voted man most likely to make people laugh, when an emcee is needed at Post parties.

WTOP-TV HAS SCHEDULED a special variety show to help boost the Community Chest drive. Scheduled for 7 to 7:30 tomorrow night, the program will have WTOP's middle-of-the-night disc jockey, Gene Klavan, as emcee. The 30-voice Telephone Company Glee Club, singer Lorenzo Hall, and other Washington artists will appear. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service; Mrs. Helen Fentress, who was helped by Community Chest, and Corp. Harris "Red" Feathers will also participate in "Among the Missing."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Community Chest Drive Must Cross That Goal Line

It's second down and 99½ yards to go. But victory is in sight.

As I write these lines, early Sunday evening, the first day of the Community Chest emergency drive for $887,000 has raised only about ½ of 1 percent of that total. And there is only one week left in which to get the remainder.

But nobody who believes in Washington is going to give up until the job is done.

District Liners got the first news of the emergency drive this morning. At telephone headquarters (Metropolitan 6262) scores of calls came in from folks who wanted to check up first-hand and find out what was going on.

Among those who called, I talked to many who made generous contributions — most of them picked up within an hour or two by Red Feather workers who had volunteered for the special pickup service.

Joseph Meyerowitz of the Bonnie Shop, 922 S. Fillmore st., Arlington, Va., was my first caller, promptly at 9 a. m. Then came Mrs. A. W. Alexander of 3233 Stephenson pl. nw., with her second contribution to this year's Chest.

Mrs. W. C. Owen of 4222 Brandywine st. nw. called at 9:30. She's just moved here from Denver, and nobody had solicited her for the campaign. Would we send somebody out? Hah! Does a duck swim? In an hour, Hugh K. Duffield, general chairman of the drive, had visited Mrs. Owen in person and gotten a fine cash contribution.

Mrs. Joy Allen of 3930 Connecticut ave. nw., was next, and at 10 a. m. we heard from Mrs. E. S. Hamilton of 2929 Westmoreland st., East Falls Church, Va. Agnes Winn of the Jefferson Hotel said: "Nobody solicited us this year. I covered this hotel for the Chest for the past two years, but I was visiting in Seattle for three months and just got back."

"Stay right where you are," I told her, "and we'll come get your money." And we did.

D. J. (Radio Joe) Kaufman of 2737 Devonshire pl. nw. had already given at home and through his business firm. But he called to kick in with an extra donation "just to keep your spirits up on the first day, when the town hasn't digested the idea yet."

Winnifred Tower of 3701 16th st. nw. was next; then Mrs. Maude Gallaher of 643 Lexington pl. ne. And Louis Kitman, the dry goods man of 100 14th st. ne. And Dr. Daniel Jaffe of 3737 Huntington st. nw.

At the stroke of 11 my caller was Theresa Woo of 1500 New Hampshire ave. nw., quickly followed by Cora B. Quinn of 1725 P st. nw., and Mrs. W. P. Snyder of 461 Hampton ct., Falls Church, Va.

And then a long, lonely pause, while my stomach reminded me that I had gotten up earlier than usual and had neglected to stoke up with enough fuel at breakfast. Mrs. Mabel Washington of 1316 U st. nw. broke the ice with another call, and Mrs. Jack K. Burness of 3317 Ferndale st., Kensington, Md., followed with the fifth donation her family has made to this year's campaign.

By that time four phones were ringing, the others being answered by volunteer telephone operators, working on their off-days.

Louis Zions of 1301 15th st. nw. said we could drop around at the Hanor Realty Co. tomorrow and pick up a check—and that one put us over the $1000 mark. Phyllis Vogel of 1619 Rhode Island ave. nw. was next, and then Ruth Hoke of 917 18th st. nw.

And just as I was being relieved for chow, I picked up a familiar voice that said:

"I want to contribute, too. Any cause that can get you out of bed at 7 o'clock on a Sunday morning must be wonderful." It finally dawned on me that I was being spoofed by my 14-year-old relative, but the Chest got the last laugh after all. We nicked him for part of his hoarded wealth.

Stuart Finley of WRC and Milton Q. Ford of WWDC were beating the drums for us yesterday, and I know that at least part of our callers can be traced to them. And I know, too, that when the disk jockeys get to work Monday morning and District Liners have had a chance to digest their Sunday papers and read the follow-up stories later in the week, this drive will begin to snowball.

But right now it's still on the half-yard line—with 99 and a half to go. And we can't cross that goal line unless YOU are on our team. Won't you call Metropolitan 6262 right now, and help a needy neighbor?

State Department folks are chuckling over this anecdote, brought back from Israel by a recent visitor.

The Israeli Government has been recruiting manpower for its tiny navy. A young fellow talked his pal into volunteering with him, and all went well until the interviewer asked: "Can you swim?"

"Let's get out of here," whispered the young man to his companion. "They don't even have any ships."

SYSTEM

A gal in our office wanted to buy herself a new coat, but never seemed to be able to save enough money. She finally worked out a painless routine, vowing she'd make each paycheck last for eight days instead of seven.

Each week for six weeks thereafter, she cashed her check one day later. At the end of the seventh week she had an extra paycheck, and bought herself a coat.

Legislators Spurred by Korea Report

By Drew Pearson

While President Truman and Clement Attlee were conferring on what to do about it, the House Armed Services Committee was hearing a grim closed-door report on the debacle in Korea.

Sherman

Admiral Forrest Sherman, efficient Chief of Naval Operations and a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, tersely reported:

"We've got to face the facts. Our military position today is worse than it was after Pearl Harbor."

Sherman revealed that the Seventh Infantry Division, stranded in northeast Korea, had been "cut to ribbons and no longer exists as a unified fighting force."

Marines in the same area, he added, were in better shape, and had been able to hold their lines together for evacuation purposes.

"It looks like we will have to evacuate and I think the Navy can handle its end of the job," Sherman said.

He added, however, that there might be "losses" if the Navy had to contend with Russian attack planes and submarines.

"But even if that happens we'll still get the job done," the admiral predicted.

Sherman's realistic report had an electrifying effect on the committee and its salty chairman, Representative Carl Vinson of Georgia. Vinson announced that he wouldn't stand for any more "business as usual" in the war production program.

The Georgian spoke his piece when William J. McNeil, Assistant Secretary of Defense, advised the committee behind closed doors that aircraft production wasn't moving too fast because of delays in getting airplane engines.

"Plants producing engines are on an eight-hour work day and at this rate it will be 18 months before warplane production will be at a peak," McNeil reported.

"Well, those plants ought to be working on a 24-hour basis," shot back Vinson. "We've got to get the job done now—not 18 months from now. We won't get it done with men working only eight hours a day. Money is not the object now. Our liberty and the freedom of the world is at stake."

Wisconsin Victory

The White House chief scored a great victory for a bipartisan foreign policy at the President's luncheon for Britain's Clement Attlee and congressional leaders on the yacht Williamsburg.

The atmosphere was somewhat stiff until jolly Senator Alex Wiley, ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, spied the dessert. Glowing with a huge smile, he told Attlee:

"Mr. Prime Minister, you are privileged to eat America's choice dessert."

It was bleu cheese from Wisconsin.

Coalition Material

Whenever friends urge President Truman to form a coalition government, he throws up his hands and wails: "But where can I get good men to come into Government?"

This column, which has urged bringing topflight Republicans into the Administration, herewith presents four experienced and able Republicans:

Paul Hoffman—Former administrator who put across the Marshall Plan in Europe. He would be a natural for a Cabinet post or for a high position in the State Department. Hoffman is now touring Europe for the Ford Foundation.

Lewis Strauss—Former secretary to Herbert Hoover in World War I, World War II admiral and recently retired from the Atomic Energy Commission. President Truman sided with Strauss in the debate over making the hydrogen bomb.

Charles Taft—Cincinnati lawyer and brother of Senator Robert Taft. Charles Taft served in both the Federal Security Agency and State Department during World War II.

General (Wild Bill) Donovan—Wartime director of the Office of Strategic Services. He organized United States spying and behind-the-lines activities, and was Assistant Attorney General in the Coolidge Administration. Some of Truman's closest advisers, including Democratic Chairman Bill Boyle, tried to persuade the President to make Donovan Secretary of Defense instead of General Marshall, but the inside fact is that Truman doesn't like him.

All the above are Republicans; all are both able and patriotic.

Heads-Up Senators

Colorado's GOP Senator Eugene Millikin, whose head is as smooth as a Colorado boulder, gave his opinion the other day of Senators who try to conceal their baldness. Millikin took the floor in self-defense at a closed-door Republican caucus, after Maine's Senator Owen Brewster made a crack about the bald-headed old-timers. Mischievously Millikin accused Brewster of trying to cover his bald head with "slicked overs," or strands of strategically combed hair.

"But the greatest deceptionist is Bob Taft," grinned Millikin with a glance at Senator Taft's thinly camouflaged head.
